"IT IS INSPIRING TO INSPIRE," Romi Garduce says on arrival.

By Alcuin Papa and Nikko Dizon

HE MAY NOT HAVE BEEN THE first to reach the summit of Mt. Everest, but Romi Garduce still came home a winner.

The nation's most accomplished mountaineer arrived home yesterday to a warm welcome from his countrymen and from officials of GMA 7, the television network that supported his climb.

Garduce reached the summit of Mt. Everest last May 19, two days after Leo Oracion and Erwin "Pastor" Emata, two other Filipino climbers from the First Philippine Mt. Everest Expedition (FPMEE), achieved the feat.

GMA 7 news director Jessica Soho said the network was impressed with Garduce's humility and decision not to turn the climb into a race.

"He has always been humble despite his amazing, fantastic credentials. His demeanor did not change during the expedition, even with the talk that this was turning out to be a race. We admire and respect his decision that he did not want to race." Soho said.

"IS THERE NO SAFETY FOR ORdinary citizens like us? Is there no security? What kind of government is this?"

These were the questions raised by Virgilio Eustaquio, chair of the Union of the Masses for Democracy and Justice, after he and four other members of the group linked to former President Joseph Estrada were freed Thursday night from their detention by the military.

Looking grim and sounding traumatized, four of the men showed up yesterday at a press briefing at the Senate and said they were holding President Macapagal-Arroyo liable for their abduction and detention by military intelligence agents.

They attended the Senate plenary debate on the budget of the Department of National Defense and witnessed senators grill Armed Porces officials on the incident through Sen. Manuel Villar Jr.

The five men were picked up

City, held incommunicado without warrants and released on "insufficient evidence" Thursday night.

"Since Ms Arroyo has made no bones about being the Commander in Chief, she should be liable for this," Eustaquio said at the briefing.

"It seems like a coincidence that the head of the Isafp (Intelligence Service of the AFP) is a relative of Gloria Arroyo's," he added on hindsight, referring to Commodore Leonardo Calderon. "I'm not surprised this has happened to us."

On the floor, Senate Minority Leader Aquilino Pimentel Jr. and Sen. Jinggoy Estrada demanded that AFP public information chief Col. Tristan Kison apologize for misleading the public on the whereabouts of Eustaquio, Ruben Dionisio, Jim Lucio Cabauatan, Dennis Ibuna and PO3 Jose Justo Curameng.

Defense Secretary Avelino Cruz and AFP Chief of Staff Gen. Generoso Senga stood by Kison, saying It was his "judgment cail" whether to apologize. But Cruz said he had ordered the Isafp Inspector General to submit a report.

Luisita hits gov't for deception

THE HACIENDA LUISITA INC. yesterday accused the govern-ment of misleading the farmerbeneficiaries of the Cojuangco estate into thinking that they would get their share of the sprawling sugar plantation next month.

Hill spokesperson Vigor Mendoza II said the Department of Agrarian Reform had told the Supreme Court in a manifestation submitted on Feb. 15 that the DAR would not yet parcel out the hacienda under the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program despite the revocation of its stock scheme.

Citing the DAR's manifestation, Mendoza said DAR legal counsel Delfin Samson told the Supreme Court that there was no need for a temporary restraining order against the CARP coverage of Luisita because Agrarian Reform Secretary Nasser C. Pangandaman had ordered the regional office to suspend the coverage.

"If Samson's claim is true, Pangandaman is practically raising faise hopes of the FWBs (farm worker beneficiaries). This is... not good for the agrarian situation here. If not (misleading the FWBs), Pangandaman was misleading the Supreme Court. This is not good either," Mendoza said in a statement.

Pangandaman, however, said he ordered the suspension of coverage of Luisita months ago only because the Presidential Agrarian Reform Council, had not yet ruled on the motion for reconsideration of the HLL been lifted," Pangandaman told

"We said we will slow down with the process first because of the HLI's filing for a temporary restraining order but the PARC has already decided to deny the HLI's motion so we're pushing through with it," he said. Blanche S. Rivera

Special CARP team for Negros

To avoid violence between farmers, landowners

By Blanche S. Rivera

AGRARIAN REFORM BENEFICIARIES YESTERDAY urged the government to form a special team to implement the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program in Negros Occidental after a group of landowners warned there would be violence if the farm workers are forcibly installed in their lands.

zation of farm workers in 300 haciendas in the province, made the proposal at a meeting last Thursday with Presidential Chief of Staff Michael Defensor and Department of Agrarian Reform officials.

The group said the team should be composed of people from the DAR central office because they claimed that local DAR officials in Negros were either "paralyzed" by fear or were "conniving" with the landowners.

They (local DAR officials) have become the mouthpiece of the landowners. They do not have a firm stand, always employing delaying tactics," said

Task Porce Mapalad, an organi- TFM national campaigns coordinator Lanie Factor.

She accused DAR personnel in Negros of passing on information to the landowners concerning DAR's plans to install the farmer beneficiaries, giving the rich owners of sugar lands time to prepare for and block the attempts.

The Coalition of Landowners of the Philippines (CLP), which is based in Bacolod City, issued a resolution on April 20 opposing the appointment of Agrarian Reform Undersecretary Narciso Nieto who they said was aggressiveby "engineering forced installations" of farmer beneficiaries.

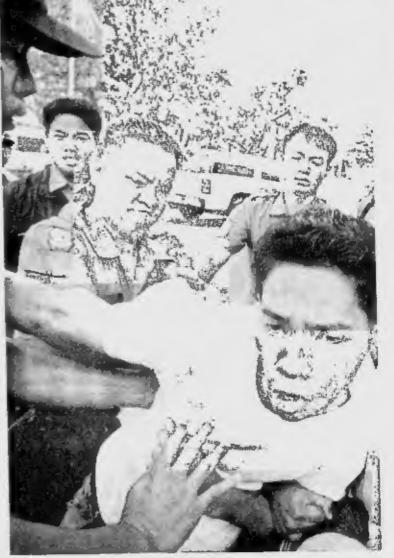

"The CLP sees these attempts hot spots identified by the DAR.

to forcibly install disputed ARBs to be premature and serves only to sow dissension and create violence on the ground resulting in loss of lives, damage to property and reduced agricultural production," the CLP said in its Resolution No. 1 series of 2006.

Nieto said he was merely doing his job as DAR field operations chief. He has been conducting dialogues with various farmers' groups in the disputed land distributions and assisting those legitimate holders of certificates of land ownership award (CLOA) who have yet to be installed.

Early this month, the DAR announced that it was prepared to enlist the help of police and the military in implementing the CARP in those areas where there is armed resistance by the landowners.

It said intervention of government armed units would be sought in agrarian reform "hot spots," or areas where there is strong, even violent, resistance by landowners. Negros is among the

The P45-billion DND budget, which had been tied up by the senators' grilling of military officials on the incident since Thursday night, was deemed submitted yesterday on the condition that the military brass submit its report on Monday.

Sen. Rodolfo Biazon, chair of the committee on national defense, set an inquiry into the incident for Tuesday.

Names unknown

Eustaquio, Cabauatan, Ibuna and Curameng turned up for the 11 a.m. briefing at the Tanada conference room, accompanied by Senators Estrada and Sergio Osmeña Ill.

Dionisio, 60, who had earlier said he was tortured and showed reporters marks on his body, was in a Metro Manila hospital, his sister Elvira Lieva told the INQUIRER.

"Our primary concern now is his health," Lleva said.

"We have consulted our they're preparing lawyers; charges," said the 47-year-old Eustaquio, in whose Quezon City house the warrantless arrests were made.

Senator Estrada later said on the floor that the five men would file criminal and administrative charges against Calderon "for authorizing the operation," the arresting agents, and Kison "for trying to cover it up."

Hearing the punches

At a press conference held at Eustaquio's house shortly after all five men were freed on Thursday night, details of alleged physical and mental torture were told.

Eustaquio, Ibuna, Cabauatan and Curameng confirmed that Dionisio, the oldest among them and the one tagged as a ranking official of the Communist Party of the Philippines in Metro Manila, got the worst of the beatings.

Even at the press conference, Dionisio was absent. He had trouble walking, Eustaquio said.

Ibuna said that on the night of their arrest, he could hear the punches landing on Dionisio's body and the latter's pleas for

"I was closest to Ruben (in the place where we were taken]. His cries, the questions asked of him, the punches and beating they made up the worst kind of torture. And I who could hear it felt I was more of a victim than he was ... because there was nothing !

"It went on the whole night. They didn't allow you to go to sleep. If you did, they hit you. You have to hear the cries of your friend," he said.

Cold place, hot place

Eustaquio said he and his friends were disoriented and could not tell night from day because they were blindfolded.

Each could not tell what had happened to the others, he said. They did not know who took them, and they were being made to admit they were part of a communist hit squad in the capital.

The first time I saw the light of day [since Monday] was when we were brought to the DOJ (Department of Justice)."

Eustaquio recalled that when they had a chance to talk, Dionisio told him the beating stopped only when he said he would admit to being a CPP official.

They gave him good food to eat, but when they asked him the composition of the [CPP] in Metro-Rizal and naturally he could not answer, the beating started again," Eustaquio said.

'Like a dog'

Jim Cabauatan said he ate blindfolded "like a dog" throughout his detention.

He said he was made to hear all sorts of noises, including the recalled. "I could stand the physisound of something being chopped to pieces.

Cabauatan, whose brother is a retired military official, said he could not eat well during his arrest because his hands were

"You were blindfolded and could not see the food," he said. "I asked them to loosen the binding on my hands, and they did a little. I had to keep my face very close to the plate."

They kept him moving, he said.

Once, he was brought to what seemed like farmland, where he heard someone cutting grass, sharpening a blade, and hammering at something.

"It came to a point that I said, 'Sir, please have pity. Don't leave cal torture, but the mental torture hurt too much."

Victim of circumstances

Among the five men, it was most difficult for Curameng, a member of the Quezon City Police, to accept what had happened.

He described himself as a victim of circumstances -a personal friend of Eustaquio's who had dropped in that fateful Monday afternoon to chat.

Curameng said that when the military agents stormed the house, he introduced himself as a cop and asked who they were.

"They told me to hit the ground, and when i insisted on asking for their identities, someme here. I don't want to die," he one stepped on my face and

"What I could not accept is that a cop [like me] had to experience something as harrowing as that. If that could happen to me, how much more to those who can't defend themselves?™

But although the experience left him terrified, Curameng said, his faith in the police and the military had not wavered.

"There may be just a few of them [doing these bad things]. [] believe] the military and police are still ready to serve the people," he said.

The Philippine Carabao Act, or Republic Act No. 7307, was enacted into law in March 1992, just a few months before Estrada ran as Eduardo Cojuangco's running mate and won Estrada yesterday made sure he got credit for the law that has resulted in the success of the country's carabao program.

PDI failed to mention Erap

"I was the one who authored the bill," Estrada told the inquirer of the law that created the Philippine Carabao Center after reading the Incurrer's Thursday issue that carabaos bred at the center are heavier and meatier than native carabaos and females produce 10 times more milk.

The biquiren article on the great strides made at the Philippine Carabao Center in Science City, Muñoz, Nueva Ecija, pieased Estrada except that it failed to mention that he authored the Carabao Act.

Estrada expressed pride over the accomplishment made by the PCC, created by the Philippine Carabao Act of 1992. Estrada sponsored the bill in the Senate while then Bataan Rep. Felicito Payumo sponsored it in the House of Representatives.

'White Revolution'

"I was helped by Senator (Leticia Ramos) Shahani. She was the coauthor. Now, we again have a project called White Revolution in reference to the program's objective of having increased milk production by carabaos," Estrada added.

Estrada said that before the carabao enhancement law was passed, Filipino farmers across the country had to content themselves with a liter of milk per water buffalo.

When the cross-breeding program of the center commenced and started producing their own carabaos, the female species were already producing at least twice as much milk. The carabao beef also improved as the buffaloes were meatier and heavier.

"The income of the farmers doubled," Estrada said.

Agri/educational

Estrada also made sure that the dispersal of the center's crossbred carabaos would be administered by agricultural education institutions, not the Department of Agriculture.

"If it was the DA that would handle the dispersal, those more influential could cause more crossbred carabaos delivered to their areas. 1 saw to it that that won't happen," Estrada said.

Carabao named Glory

Ten years after the law was enacted, the PCC's test tube technique in carabao reproduction resulted in the birth of "Glory," a 44-kilo water buffalo that can produce as much as 14 liters of milk a day.

Glory was fronically named after President Macapagal-Arroyo who succeeded Estrada following the latter's ouster caused in January 2001.

One of the succeeding calves, however, was named Erap after Estrada. There were also calves named Fidel and Cory after former Presidents Fidel Ramos and Corazon Aquino.

'Carabao English'

Estrada said he was ribbed by Sen. John Osmeña when he was pushing for the carabao bill in the Senate.

"Sonny Osmeña said Erap was being aggressive in pushing for the carabao bill because of one thing. You know what that is? It's because he speaks carabao English," Estrada said, managing to laugh at his reputation of speaking less than good English.

S Senate OKs bill to allow foreign

The bill passed 62-36 despite deep divisions within the majority Republican Party and among Americans.

The Senate bill has the bipartisan support of Republican Sen. John McCain and Democratic Sen. Edward Kennedy as well as the backing of Republican President George W. Bush.

Senators wrapped up two months of debate on the reforms Bush has sought for more than two years. The bill aims to stem illegal immigration but welcome illegal immigrants who have already been integrated into US society. Bush saluted passage of the text and said effective immigration reforms must address both economic and border security needs and "honor America's great tradition of the melting pot."

"I look forward to working together with both the House of Representatives and the Senate to produce a bill for me to sign into law," he said.

However, the bill's final adoption is hardly guaranteed, as it differs sharply from a tougher bill passed in the lower House of Representatives, and the two must be reconciled. "Today is not the day to celebrate. We have won a big battle but not the war," Senate Democratic leader Harry Reid said. The Senate bill would create 200,000 temporary work visas for foreigners who take low-skill jobs here, and double the number of US Border Patrol agents on the border with

The bill also includes funding to build a 600-km wall along the Mexican border to block illegal entry.

Amnesty

It is derided by some as an "amnesty."

"The problem with this bill is that it is an amnesty bill, or a legalization bill, that I think is just fundamentally unfair to millions of people waiting around the world trying to get into this country legally, as well as the millions who have come into this country and waited and paid dearly, I might add, to come into this country legally," Sen. Rick Santorum

Not so, according to Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist, who said, "We've taken a bill that the American people would have concluded was amnesty and by my lights, we took the amnesty out while we put the security in."

Senators will have difficulty bringing their bill into line with a much tougher version passed by the House in December. The House would make unapproved US entry a federal crime and bolster border security.

Immigrant rights activists and religious officials fiercely oppose it.

Los Angeles Cardinal Roger Mahony said the Senate bill contained "objectionable provisions" but was nevertheless "an important step toward achieving effective immigration reform in our nation that is just, fair and hu-

De Venecia endorses $503-M NorthRail project

By Philip C. Tubeza

HOUSE SPEAKER JOSE DE VEnecia on Thursday pushed for the controversial $503 million Northrail transit system, which is now under Senate investigation for alleged irregularities.

De Venecia maintained that his role in the project was aboveboard and that he had been publicly discussing the Philippine railway modernization program for years.

Besides China, he said, he had also invited South Korea, Austria, Germany and Saudi Arabia to participate "because we need simultaneous, not sequential, development of the rail systems in Luzon, the Visayas and Mindanao.

The Speaker's name was again linked to the rail project on Tuesday after NorthRail Corp. president Jose Cortes told the Senate that De Venecia hosted meetings between government officials and Chinese Embassy representatives in his Makati residence.

But De Venecia said everyone knew that there were only two venues for his meetings—at the Speaker's office in Congress when the House of Representatives is in session and at his Makati residence. "This has been my practice since 1987," he said.

Unlike the existing one-track system, the project is a doubletrack system that will lay more than 62 kilometers of track estimated to ferry 350,000 commuters daily.

The project is funded by a $400-million loan from the Chinese government with the Philippines providing $100 million as its counterpart fund.

When it was launched last year, Minister Xiao Qian of the Chinese Embassy had called it the "largest Chinese project in Southeast Asia," and the first 20-year concessionary loan ever extended by China to any government.

De Venecia said the government was also pushing for a Visayan rail system possibly with support from the German, Austrian and Saudi governments.

The hearings would be held Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays.

"As of now, with the number of witnesses to be presented and the possibility of the presentation of rebuttal and sur-rebuttal witnesses, the court is not taking any chances. The offended party has a right, the accused have their rights," said Pozon, during a premial conference yesterday after-notoriously corrupt among Asian nations and a pariah to the whole international community,' Salonga told the Inquire there were fundamental issues at stake.

"You can't give up the moral sense of right and wrong ... If we enter a compromise agreement with the Marcoses, we'd be showing that crime pays."

Salonga took exception to Abcede's argument that after 20 years, it was time to negotiate a settlement with the Marcos family.

"Allow me to say that questions of right or wrong do not fade away or disappear after 20 or 50 years," Salonga said.

"Up to now, the Marcoses are telling the people they have no more money and yet the Marcoses are saying they can pay off the country's foreign and domestic debts," Salonga said, referring to a boast once made by former first lady Imelda Marcos.

She has also said the Marcos family has so much wealth that she no longer knows extent of its total assets.

"Where did they get all this money? If your total assets are worth more than twice your legitimate income, the proof is on you to say that all these are legitimate acquisitions," Salonga said.

Lost evidence

The PCGG cannot use the excuse that some of the documentary pieces of evidence against the Marcoses had been lost through the years.

He said the Marcos documents used by the PCGG in its cases versus the family were "duplicate originals" or photocopies that may still be presented as valid pieces of evidence. If these were lost, the originals are still in the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas, he said.

There is also a set of duplicate originais that I brought to the Bank of Philippine Islands," Salonga said.

Salonga, however, said he no longer knew what had become of the duplicate originals inside the BPI vault. He said he gave the key to the documents' vault to his successor, Ramon Diaz, who has since died.

Evidence in USA

"For good measure, another set of duplicate originals are with PCGG lawyers in California. They computerized and classified these documents," he added.

said the proposed out-of-court settlement with the Marcoses also faced serious legal obstacles.

"It is completely against the 1998 decision of the Supreme Court penned by then Associate Justice and now Supreme Court Chief Justice Artemio Panganiban," Salonga said, referring to the SC ruling striking down the PCGG's first compromise deal with the Marcoses.

The Supreme Court, at that time, ruled that the provision in the agreement about the government causing dismissal of court cases against the Marcoses "is an encroachment on judicial powers, particularly in regard to criminal jurisdiction." The high court also said that a deal with the Marcoses would be a warrant for public officials to amass public funds illegally "since there is an open option to compromise their liability in exchange for only a portion of their ill-gotten wealth."

Change of tack

Abcede, for his part, indicated he would now talk less about the Marcos issue.

"I intend to keep my silence on these matters after this one last statement, after which I will be inclined to talk about reconciliation or settlement issues only when public interest so demands,' Abcede told reporters yesterday.

He said he would invest "all of my waking hours on legitimate, backbreaking official work, to help pump badly needed funds into government coffers, rather than to fritter away time speaking in my defense."

"My inviting Mrs. Marcos to my party was my way of announcing to the world that the former first lady and I were indeed in good enough terms to jointly embark on a possible amicable settlement on the disputed Marcos wealth. Mrs. Marcos was gracious enough to ask me for a dance and I was civil enough to accept," Abcede said.

Abcede promised to keep the people informed not only of "the final terms of any settlement that may be arrived at, but also of the twists and turns that develop on our way to that possible settlement." With a report from Alcuin Papa

No deal, says FVR

By Cynthia D. Balana

FORMER PRESIDENT FIDEL RAMOS strongly opposed a compromise on the Marcos assets.

At a press conference, Ramos said that while entering into a compromise was a normal negotiating procedure, this should not apply to criminal cases.

"There must be no negotiation or settlement in regard to the criminal cases. That's nonnegotiable," he said. "In regard to return or restoration or discovery or acquisition of the wealth, I have no comment because I am not up-to-date on that."

Ramos reminded the PCGG that it had been mandated by the Constitution and the law to pursue the ill-gotten wealth of the Marcoses, the proceeds of which should go to the land reform program.

He said that in 1997, when he was still president, $350 million of the so-called hidden wealth of the Marcoses were turned over to the government through negotiations with Switzerland, not with the Marcoses.

"Every effort should be exerted to bring in more of the hidden wealth," Ramos stressed. "The principle, to begin with, is that that is public money."

Asked about reports that PCGG Commissioner Ricardo Abcede was dancing with former first lady Imelda Marcos during the former's birthday party recently, Ramos said it was improper.

Why Enron founding chair, ex-CEO convicted

As the verdicts were read, Lay slumped, sighed heavily and shook his head, his sobbing wife Linda tightly clutching his arm.

Skilling looked shaken.

US District Judge Sim Lake set sentencing for Sept. 11.

In the courtroom, Lay and his weeping family members gathered in a circle, clasped hands and prayed.

"God's got another plan right now," Lay, the son of a preacher, said without tears. We'll all come through this stronger and more reliant on God."

Outside the courthouse, he said the verdict had "shocked" him.

"I firmly believe I am innocent of the charges against me," Lay said. "If I were a CEO today, I would say it sends a very dangerous message. (It) basically makes an innocent act criminal."

Lay, 64, Enron founder and former chairman, was convicted of all six counts of conspiracy and fraud and faces a maximum of 45 years in prison.

Skilling, 52, former chief executive officer, was found guilty of 19 counts of conspiracy, fraud, insider trading and making false statements which, combined, carry a maximum sentence of 185 years.

In a separate trial for Lay, Judge Lake found him guilty of all four bank fraud charges for illegally using money from $75 million in personal loans to buy stock

Each of those four charges carries a maximum of 30 years, but experts say he is unlikely to be sentenced to more than six months for each because he paid off the loans and the lenders suffered no damage.

Lay and Skilling, who once moved comfortably in the highest circles of society and politics, will remain free on a $5-million bond until they are sentenced.

7th largest company

Enron, which at its height was the nation's seventh-largest company, collapsed in December 2001 into the biggest US bankruptcy at the time amid disclosures it used off-the-books deals to hide billions of dollars in debt and inflate profits.

It also was revealed that chief financial officer Andy Pastow had looted the company of $60 million while running the side deals.

Prosecutors charged that Lay and Skilling knew Erron's reports of booming profits were just financial trickery but told the world all was well to keep the stock price up even as the Houston-based power trader slid toward its demise.

Deputy US Attorney General Paul Mc-Nulty hailed the convictions.

Message of verdict

The message of today's verdict is simple: Our criminal laws will be enforced just as vigorously against corporate executives as ... with street criminals," he said.

White House spokesperson Tony Snow said the administration "has been pretty clear there's no tolerance for corporate corruption."

Attorneys for Lay and Skilling vowed to fight the convictions.

Skilling was almost philosophical.

"I think we fought a good fight but some things work and some things don't," he told reporters. "Obviously I am disappointed but that is the way the system works."

Lay attorney Mike Ramsey also promised an appeal.

"The biggest issue is the venue issue," he said, meaning the trial should not have been held in Houston, where Enron

Former Enron employee Chris Jones, 35, stood outside the courthouse as his former bosses left the building. "If it (the guilty verdict) hadn't happened it would have been an openwound," he said. "This brings closure for some people." In testimony, Lay and Skilling said they painted a rosy picture of the company because they believed it was in great shape, not because they wanted to cover up problems.

Key testimony Skilling resigned suddenly in August 2001 after just six months as CEO and was replaced by Lay. The two men testified that Skilling left because he was

They blamed media coverage and Fastow's thievery for a financial crisis that sank the firm they built from a quiet pipeline business into an international trading powerhouse.

Jurors, who were in their sixth day of deliberations, said some of the most important testimony came from former Enron treasurer Ben Glisan, who was already serving a five-year prison sentence.

Glisan testified Skilling and Lay knew Enron was in deep financial trouble and tried to hide it.

Pastow tearfully told the jury of his misdeeds and said Skilling and Lay were deeply involved in a massive cover-up. He has pleaded guilty to conspiracy in exchange for a 10-year jail sentence.

Prosecutors said Lay and Skilling milked Enron for hundreds of million of dollars and lived lives of luxury while driving the company into bankruptcy. Lay took home $220 million in compensation from the sale of Enron shares from 1999 through 2001, while Skilling got $150 million, Assistant US Attorney John Hueston said.

Lay used his and the company's money to gain political power by donating heavily to candidates, particularly Republicans and especially the Bush family. He was the biggest donor to President George W. Bush, who before the Enron scandal referred to him warmly as "Kenny Boy."

No fraud, at all

While Lay and Skilling left Enron with their fortunes intact, hundreds of employees saw their retirement savings wiped out as Enron stock lost all value.

Lay and Skilling entered the trial with a claim that shocked many: Not only were they innocent of wrongdoing, no fraud at all occurred at Enron.

On the witness stand, Lay bickered and bristled, even with his own lawyer. Lay arrogantly defended his extravagant lifestyle, including a $200,000 yacht for wife Linda's birthday party. "It was difficult to turn off that lifestyle like a spigot," Lay said. AP Reuters when renegade Timorese soldiers opened fire on unarmed police in the Timorese capital of Dili, the Department of Foreign Affairs said.

Layon, one of five Philippine National Police officers serving as advisers with the United Nations Office in Timor, is "stable and out of danger," the DFA said.

He was airlifted to Darwin, Australia, for medical treatment along with another wounded UN officer. Layon's wife, Rochelle, has been informed of the incident, the DFA said.

Civil war

Besides the five PNP men, a Filipino military officer is also working at the UN office in Dili, it said.

East Timor lies about 320 km north-northwest of Australia at the eastern end of the Indonesian archipelago. It is approximately 1,500 km south of Mindanao.

Foreign troops struggled Priday to stave off civil war in the desperately poor country which won independence from Indonesia in 1999.

Nine Timorese police were killed in Thursday's violence during which Layon was wounded. In a separate incident, a mob torched a house on the outskirts of the capital Dili after spraying it with gasoline, killing all six people inside.

C-130 on standby

Foreign Secretary Alberto Romulo has asked Defense Secretary Avelino Cruz Jr to have an Air Force C-130 placed on standby "to evacuate around 200 Filipinos from Dili, if the need arises," a DFA statement said. Romulo also instructed Ambessador Roy ent account of Thursday's shooting. Machete-wielding youths

The Associated Press said it was members of the tiny country's 800-strong army who opened fire on the police, suspecting them of allying themselves with about 600 dismissed soldiers who have engaged in days of deadly street battles with the army in Dili.

to pass unharmed. The violence followed the government's decision in March to fire 600 soldiers 40 percent of the military after they staged a month-long strike to protest poor pay and conditions, moves that highlighted simmering tensions in a nation divided along east-west lines.

The violence that began late April has claimed 25 lives, 20 of them in the past four days.

Guerrilla warfare ach "after renegade soldiers opened fire

After engaging in deadly riots last month, rebel troops fled the capital, setting up positions in the surrounding hills and threatening guerrilla warfare if they were not reinstated.

Some police officers have also begun to ally themselves with the disgruntled soldiers, Jean-Marie Guehenno, the chief of the UN peacekeeping department, said in New York.

He said Thursday's shooting at the national police headquarters apparently was triggered when the officers were esconed from the building, saw the soldiers and "became nervous and started to hurry."

"What I understand, in the very tense situation that existed there, there was some movement and then soldiers apparently opened fire and that's when the police officers were killed," said Guehenno.

Peacekeepers arrive

Australia, which led a multinational peacekeeping force in East Timor in 1999 that ended a bloody rampage by Indonesian troops and their militia proxies, said it would send the nation up to 1,300 troops, along with ships, helicopters and armored personnel carriers.

Hundreds of heavily armed Australian forces arrived Thursday and Priday, with the remainder expected to reach East Timor as early as Saturday.

New Zealand Prime Minister Helen Clark said her nation would send up 120 troops. Portugal, which colonized East Timor for four centuries until 1975, also got the go-ahead to send 120 troops, while Malaysia pledged 500.

Broken skeletons

The six people inside the torched house on the outskirts of Dili-five women and a child-were little more than burned and broken skeletons. The attackers-four men, dressed in black and wearing balaclavas, neighbors said-came in the middle of the night, broke the windows of the concrete dwelling, doused it in petrol and set it ablaze.

"This is a revenge attack," said Jose Moucho, standing outside the remains of the house, "It's just like 1999."

"Worst day"

That year is etched into the memory of the East Timorese, a time when the vote for independence from Indonesia descended into brutal violence that left nearly 200,000 people dead or displaced.

US Ambassador Joseph Rees came to see the carnage for himself. "We saw the worst day in the history of this country since independence, and we're all hopeful things will get a lot better very dramatically," he said. With reports from AP AFP

Cop in Palawan broadcaster's slay sacked from service

By Marlon Ramos and Jofelle P. Tesorio PDI Southern Luzon Bureau

CAMP VICENTE LIM-THE POliceman suspected to be behind the murder of Puerto Princesa City broadcaster Fernando "Dong" Batul was discharged from the police service yesterday.

Chief Supt. Delfin Genio, Mimaropa police chief, said he ordered the dismissal of PO1 Aaron Golifardo after he was implicated in the killing of a certain Maximo Palces and the wounding of the victim's companion in Puerto Princesa last March 1, 2002.

Genio clarified that his dismissal of the erring policeman had nothing to do with the Batul

"The dismissal case against him has been pending for some time now. It just happened that he was named in this new case," Genio told the INOUREIL

The regional internal affairs service (RIAS) of the Mimaropa police had found Golifardo guilty of grave misconduct charges filed against him for the killing of Palces.

But instead of discharging him, the RIAS meted a "force resignation" penalty against the police-

Golifardo, 38, assigned at the 412nd police provincial mobile group in Palawan, was identified by four witnesses as one of the two armed men who gunned down Batul while he was on his way to work on Monday.

Police have already filed murder charges against Golifardo, who is now detained at the Palawan provincial jail, and another suspect, still at large, in the Batul slay.

The case was raffled to Judge Chito Merigillano of Branch 51.

Police chief Arturo Lomibao has instructed investigators to ensure that "an air- tight case is established" against Golifardo.

Chief Supt. Raul Genio personally arrested Golifardo in Camp Crame on Wednesday afternoon. He was at the camp to attend to an administrative charge filed by his wife and civildren who accused him of failing to support them financially.

A check showed that Golifardo was listed in the passenger manifest of Air Philippines flight 2P-214 that left Puerto Princesa City at 11:22 a.m. of May 22, some five hours after Batul was shot dead by two motorcycle-riding men.

His plane arrived in Manila at

According to PNP records, Golifardo joined the police service on Sept. 19, 1998 and had been assigned in Palawan ever since.

cent last March and the budget surplus in April was the highest in nine years, she said.

DESCRIBING HERSELF AS A "PROUD, ARDENT saleswoman" for the country, President Macapagal-Arroyo yesterday told an international audience of financial market practitioners that she was bullish on the nation's prospects and urged them to bring their investments here.

But she said she was also a realist and knew there was much to be done given the problems plaguing the nation, including poverty and corruption.

T come before you here today full of hope, tempered by realism, that we are a nation worth the attention and the investments of the financial markets," Ms Arroyo told some 500 financial practitioners gathered at the Philippine International Convention Center for the 45th Asociacion Cambiste Internationale (ACI) Financial Markets Association World Congress Philippines.

Launching into her sales pitch, the President said her government had created over five million jobs in the past five years and that inflation was easing up. Exports grew 26 per-

She also noted that the country was enjoying a tourism boom and that prime sites like Clark and Subic were being developed. For the first time, she said, the government was collecting revenues needed for investments in infrastructure, healthcare, education and job creation.

"My government has exerted vigorous efforts to balance the budget, keep the overall security situation safe from terrorists, push growth and pursue political renewal," Ms Arroyo said.

The President said she had invested a lot of her time and effort in getting the nation engaged in global affairs to help modernize it. Christine Avendaño

2,000 job-seekers duped of P35M

By Jerome Aning

ALMOST 2,000 FILIPINOS DREAMING OF LUcrative employment abroad were duped into forking out close to P35 million for non-existent jobs in the first four months of the year, the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration said yesterday.

POEA Administrator Rosalinda Dimapilis-Baldoz said she was unhappy that the office had not been able to fully press charges against more suspected illegal recruiters because many complainants agreed to withdraw civil action after their money was returned.

She advised workers seeking jobs overseas to double-check with the agency to make sure recruiters had valid licenses and to be informed about the modus operandi of illegal recruiters.

From January to April 2006, Baldoz said, suspected illegal recruiters managed to wangle P34,787,704 from 1,715 victims, most of them coming from the cities of Manila, Quezon and Makati and the provinces of Cavite, Bulacan and Pangasinan.

She also revealed that a number of licensed recruitment agencies were facing administrative complaints for offering jobs in the United Kingdom, South Korea, Sweden and United Arab Emirates that were found to be non-existent.

The non-existent job orders were for factory workers, caregivers, farm workers, domestic helpers and seafarers.

Are we asking for missionaries, for martyrs, for steadfastness in persecution, for those who will encourage the Church with the Scriptures, for believers to know joy as they struggle to be good news?

Third on Everest ...

"It was never a competition. You need a different mind-set. Being first is not significant. It's good there were three of us to meet the same objectives," a tanned Garduce told a press conference at the GMA 7 network.

Besides, there are other supreme feats for Philphos to attempt, he said. His own target: The South Pole.

Everest, the world's highest peak, was not the ultimate adventure for him but "just a big start."

"One of the things you will realize when you do this [is that] it's never-ending. You will feel temporary triumph. Always there is that inner energy, a struggle to do something more," Garduce said.

Loud cheers and applause greeted Garduce as he stepped into the arrival concourse of the Ninoy Aquino International Airport at about 3:45 p.m. yesterday.

He flew in from Bangkok with his support team, Henry Nakpil, president of the UP Mountaineers, and the GMA 7 Everest coverage team led by reporter Jiggy Manicad.

Oracion and Emata are scheduled to arrive next Tuesday.

Low-key departure

The rousing welcome was a stark contrast to Garduce's low-key departure for Nepal three months ago, covered only by GMA 7 and

Wearing an outdoor shirt and khaki trousers, the shy Garduce had to be egged on to seat himself for the airport press conference, apparently bewildered by his instant celebrity.

Garduce began by saying how happy he was that his feat and that of the two other Filipino mountaineers has had a positive impact on fellow Pilipinos.

"It's inspiring to inspire," he said, adding that he would engage in more adventures and share the experience with others by writing about them.

Tm sharing this success with all Filipinos. This is a shared feat. We are recognized in the international community that the Filipino can. Mabuhay ang Pinoy!" a smiling Garduce said.

Before the start of the airport press conference, Garduce met briefly with retired Jose Cardinal Sanchez who arrived on the same flight.

Garduce was again overwhelmed by wellwishers at the Quezon City offices of GMA 7 where a thanksgiving Mass was said for him and members of the coverage team.

"I did not expect this. It's a pleasant surprise. It's very flattering and it's my first time to experience this," said the Balanga, Bataan, native who admitted to being a "private" person who preferred to hang our with friends from the University of the Philippines Mountaineers (UPM).

The bachelor mountaineer was mobbed by female employees of the network. But it would seem marriage is a challenge he would prefer not to take on yet.

"It's tougher to get married than to climb Everest. It's hard enough to manage yourself, you still have to manage another person," said the 37year-old information technology manager.

Nothing impossible

For Garduce, climbing is more about the self than anything else. "You will know who you are when you climb mountains. You will realize that nothing is impossible," he said.

But for now, Garduce is just glad to be home and spend time with his family.

"I'm more relieved than anything else. Now there is no pressure," he said. "Thanks for the warm welcome and thanks to , my supporters and media who allowed me to share this experience with our countrymen," he said. The Everest season this year was the second deadliest with at least 10 people dying in the attempt to scale the summit. Garduce said he felt the danger throughout his climb. "The Khumbu kefall was already melting and, there were a lot of crevasses. In some parts, we wouldn't clip our ropes anymore because some of the anchors had already come off," he said,

Garduce could have had the chance to be the "First Pinoy on Everest."

When he left for Nepal on March 3, he was the only Filipino attempting to scale Everest. But two weeks later, he was followed by Oracion and Emata, two Philippine Coast Guard servicemen who are members of the First Philippine Mt. Everest Expedition (FPMEE). Oracion and Emata's climb was sponsored by the ABS-CBN television network so that the Philippine conquest of Everest rapidly developed into a competition between the country's two largest television networks. Garduce said the scenario changed in April when many others attempted the climb. He said his "mind-set" changed. "I am not so selfish that I must always be first. There are so many other opportunities [for adventure] and Everest is just one of them," he said in a mixture of English and Filipino.

"Definitely I wanted to conquer Everest. It was a personal goal," Garduce said. "But being No. 1 is just the icing on the cake," he said. Garduce said he was not there to race. "I just executed my plan," he said. Garduce said he had met Oracion and Emata and that "everything's OK." He said Oracion was a frequent visitor at his quarters at the Base Camp "since he gets easily bored."

power from President Macapagal-Arroyo in February.

Justice Secretary Raul Gonzalez had earlier ordered that the Barasan 5 be put on the watch list. But the Makati court has yet to issue a hold-departure order on any of them.

It is now obvious that the Arroyo government and the justice system are being perverted and manacled by the Cocis. [Even without] a court order backing it, the Cocis has curbed my constitutional right to travel. [It] is acting like the highest court in the land," Ocampo said.

The Cocis is composed of the executive secretary, the justice, defense and interior secretaries, the national security adviser, and the chiefs of the National Intelligence Coordinating Agency, Armed Forces and Philippine National Police. Ocampo said he could have chosen to push through with his trip because a watchlist order did not carry the same force and effect as a court-issued hold-departure order.

But he decided to go through the paces of seeking Gonzalez's permission to travel, he said.

In his account to the Inquirer, Ocampo said it was Gonzalez who informed him of the Cocis' decision: "When we talked over the phone the other day, he said, I have bad news for you. The Cabinet Cluster E doesn't want to approve your request."

Gonzalez told Ocampo that he had to secure a travel permit from the House of Representatives.

Ocampo pointed out that a copy of the travel order issued by House Secretary General Roberto Nazareno was attached to the letter be sent to the Department of Justice on Wednesday.

"I haven't read it," replied, Gonzalez adding that only Rep. Eduardo Zialcita (Lakas, Paraiiaque) who had also been invited as a speaker and had no pending case, could attend the confer-

The International Conference on the Cancellation of Illegitimate Debts, which runs from May 27 to 29, is sponsored by the International Nongovernment Organization Forum on Indonesian Development.

Travel authority

On May 16, Nazareno issued Ocampo travel authority for his trip to Jakarta, certifying that he was eligible for exemption from the travel tax.

Ocampo said the Department of Foreign Affairs revalidated his diplomatic passport and issued him a tax exemption voucher. He said Gonzalez even assured him early this week that Gonzalez himself would recommend the approval of his travel request because "technically, you have no case."

In a May 24 memorandum to Executive Secretary Eduardo Ermita, a copy of which was furnished the INQUIRER, Gonzalez said he was asking the Cocis to decide on Ocampo's request "in view of the inclusion of [Ocampo's] name in the watch-list order issued by me in connection with the rebellion case filed against the Batasan 5."

But Gonzalez made his position clear in the memorandum: "Personally, I'm opposed to the lifting of the watch-list order ... because it might adversely affect the rebellion case filed against [Ocampo] before the Makati RTC. Moreover, to grant his request for clearance to travel abroad will open the floodgate for the other accused ... to seek the same treatment, and this might send a wrong signal to the public that the government case against them is weak."

'Puppet master'

Ocampo said Gonzalez had put the justice ; department under the supervision of the "anti-Left and fascist personalities within the Cabinet."

"Now it can be told that the Cocis is the? puppet master pulling the strings on Gonzalez, their marionette cum lightning rod," 1 Ocampo said, adding:

"The persecution of the Batasan 5 and Bel-4 tran emanates from this high echelon of Cabinet members, and Gonzalez is merely taking . orders from them."

Ocampo pointed out that the proper procedure would have been for the Cocis and Gonzalez to ; ask the Makati RTC to issue a travel ban on him.

There is no court order backing the Cocis. In fact, it violated the prerogatives of the Makari RTC," he said.

Ocampo said his request for travel clearance was based on the Supreme Court ruling declaring unconstitutional government acts under Proclamation No. 1017, including General Order No. 5, which put the country under a week-long state of emergency in Pebruary.

"That ruling also rendered null and void my name's inclusion in the March 1 watch-list order issued by Gonzalez," he said. Ocampo said Gonzalez should not fear that he

new bishop for Manila

POPE BENEDICT XVI HAS APpointed another bishop to assist Manila Archbishop Gaudencio Cardinal Rosales in running the country's premier diocese.

Fr. Broderick Pabillo was named auxiliary bishop of Manila, joining another auxiliary prelate, Bishop Bernardino Cortez.

At 51, Pabillo will be among the country's youngest bishops.

The Vatican announced Pabillo's appointment at noon Wednesday and was subsequently relayed to the Philippine Church and media later in the evening by the new apostolic nuncio, Archbishop Fernando Filoni.

Pabillo was in the mountains of Palawan where he's been on a mission since 1999 when the news came out, according to Peachy Yamsuan, communications director of the archdiocese.

A PROTESTANT BLOC HAS ENdorsed the Bastes Commission's recommendation to stop mining on Rapu-Rapu Island and for a review of the Mining Act.

"We urge all Filipinos to support and uphold the recommendations of the Bastes Commission. We reiterate our call to our lawmakers to repeal this very destructive law to protect God's creation," the National Council of Churches in the Philippines said in a statement.

Sharon Duremdes, the NCCP secretary general, said the report of the fact-finding body headed by Sorsogon Bishop Arturo Bastes "validated the negative effects of large-scale mining to the people and to the environment."

The NCCP represents 13 million members of mainly Procestant churches.

The Bastes Commission was creared by Malacafiang to investigate allegations that the operations of the Australian-based Lafayette Mining on Rapu-Rapu had contaminated the waters off Sorsogon.

Environment Secretary Angelo Reves said he would base his decision on the fate of the mining company on the report of the commission as well as the results of a dialogue between Lafayette and Rapu-Rapu residents.

The municipal council of Rapu-Rapu favors letting Lafayette continue its operations provided it complies with environmental public health laws.

A member of the commission yesterday environmental concerns should be given more weight in deciding whether or not Lafayette should be allowed to stay.

"In all issues, I would say that the environment, effects on which are long-term, should be given very very high priority in decision-making," geochemist Aloysius Baes told a forum at the Ambassador Hotel vesterday.

Baes said that while he recognized that mining may be the answer to the country's economic woes, it does not seem to be the case in Lafayette's Rapu-Rapu op-

According to Baes, the government only earned about P2 mil-last year, representing the excise tax paid by the company.

He noted that countries like Guyena and Australia get over 50 percent in pre-tax shares from mining operations while the Philippines only gets a 2 percent excise tax.

The commission's vice chair Charles Avila said the people should be more sensitive to the plight of the ilon from Lafayette's operations larger public and not just focus on those who benefit from mining.

"Sometimes we celebrate the giving of jobs to 300 to 500 people, but we are not sensitive to the 4,000 to 5,000 others who have a hard time because the waters do not give as before, the earth does not give as before," he said. ### Toadyism

N SUBSTANCE AND FORM, THE PRESIDENTIAL Commission on Good Government's tack to settle with the Marcoses in connection with their ill-gotten wealth cases is in poor taste. There's much to worry about the moral implications of settling with the Marcoses; the issue itself is a moral millstone around the neck of the Filipino people, and most especially of the PCGG which is tasked to pursue plunder issues against EDITORIAL the Marcoses and their cronies.

But even increasingly worrisome is the poor form in which the PCGG is pushing the envelope. It does not seem to mind the sensitivities being violated in its apparent act to consort with the enemy.

The insensitivity is reflected in PCGG Commissioner Ricardo Abcede's invitation for Imelda Marcos to attend his birthday party recently. Now, it may be Abcede's private business whom to invite over to his parties, but considering that he is a public official assigned to prosecute the Marcoses, who face 500 ill-gotten wealth cases, it is the public's business to remind him his private business may be the public's privation. The invitation smacks of sleeping with the enemy.

But, alas, Abcede does not seem to know his enemies. "I just wanted to have fun with friends," he said, in defense of his birthday party. So does he consider Imelda Marcos a personal friend? How does that relate with his "public" task of prosecuting the ill-gotten wealth cases against her? Whose side is he on, anyway?

Abcede said that since he is pursuing an amicable settlement with the Marcoses, "I have to be amicable with them." This seems to betray a certain defeatism, if not toadyism.

Even more egregious is Abcede's explanation why he is being amicable to Imelda Marcos: "I am negotiating from a position of strength, but I would also like them to be in the proper frame of mind so they will be open to a compromise."

The remarks indicate otherwise: the PCGG is not negotiating from a position of strength, but of extreme weakness. How else could one explain Abcede's attempt to be extra-amicable with Imelda Marcos? How else could one explain his attempts to soothe and relax the Marcoses so that they would be "in the proper frame of mind" and "be open to a compromise"?

The last phrase, in fact, signals who has the upper hand in the issue: It reveals that the PCGG is pursuing a policy of rapprochement and even of appeasement with the Marcoses in order to soften their stance and "be open to a compromise." The Marcoses are in a position of strength, while the PCGG is in a position of . . . slavish-

Abcede, otherwise a lawyer who has had a credible private practice and someone who really knows his law and legal tactics, should realize that by pushing for a settlement, the government is doing the Marcoses a service. It has practically reversed the process of legal settlements. Instead of the Marcoses, it's the government suing for peace. It's the prosecutor suing for a way out. It's the hunter being hunted. We see the PCGG attack dog with its tail wagging between its legs!

We would have been spared the unseemly sight of a government doing the bidding of the Marcoses if the PCGG has bothered as much with the content as with the form. Abcede and PCGG Chair Camilo Sabio have been dangling the prospect of an amicable settlement with the Marcoses. Abcede may have denied he has been "trumpeting" it all along, but at the least, he seems to have offered the prospect as a trial balloon to test the public's receptivity to the idea. Either way, he has gotten the public's reaction, and in the process, weakened the government's position. He is handing the Marcoses a legal and a moral victory on a silver platter.

Inevitably, the bad form owes to a corrupt soul, an immoral core. If the government had pursued the moral case against the Marcoses, then it would strengthen the legal claim against them. Morality underpins all the legal claims against the Marcos dictatorship, and Abcede and the PCGG should not forget that. If the people don't stick to the moral, then they risk becoming moral lemons. Or at the least, they risk becoming toadies to the Marcoses.

An imperfect Constitution

LET'S MAKE IT CLEAR AT THE OUTSET. Those against the Cha-cha are not necessarily against re-examining and changing the Consticution. It's the procedure being employed by the dancers that we object to. That will be my subject for this column tomorrow.

The Constitution of 1987 was framed by an appointive Constitutional Commission and not by a constitutional convention of elected delegates. While the commissioners were generally competent-a number of them exceptionally so-they were still not truly representative of the electorate and its special in-

One might say that their common qualification, irrespective of their expertise (or none of it) in the art of constitution-making, was the confidence in each of them of President Corazon Aquino. They did not even have to be confirmed by a then non-existent Commission on Appointments. An examination of their roster will reveal some obscure members who, ironically, did not become prominent in their secluded enclaves.

The commissioners came from various sectors with diverse persuasions, which could be one reason why they were unable to meet their deadline. They approved their handiwork one month later and recommended to the President that it be submitted to the people not within 60 days as originally scheduled but after three months.

The campaign for the ratification of the draft Constitution was led by President Aquino herself. Opposition to the document, while spirited, was largely disorganized and consequently ineffective. Many people, while doubtful about some of its provisions and especially its length, nevertheless voted for the proposed Constitution because they felt it would provide the stability the country sorely need at that against. The Constitution became effective on Feb. 2, 1987.

The most notable flaw of the Constitution of 1987 is its verbosity and consequent prolixity that have dampened popular interest in what should be the common concern of the nation. It would seem that every one of the members of the Commission wanted to put in it his two centavos worth, and unfortunately succeeded. thereby expanding the charter to unseemly di-

Thus, in some of its provisions, the Constitution sounds more like a political speech than a formal document staring only basic legal precepts. It is full of platitudes. This is true of the policies on social justice and the national economy which should have been worded with less loquacity to give the legislature more leeway in their implementation.

Such policies could have been expressed briefly without loss of substance if the framers had performed their solemn task with less personal vainglory, let alone distrust of the legislature. What is worse is the inclusion of certain subjects that have no place in an austere Constitution, like sports, love, drugs and even ad-

Especially pretentious is the tortuous language of some of its commands like the following masterpiece of circumlocution in Art. XVI,

The State shall provide the policy environment for the full development of Filipino capability and the emergence of communication of the nation and the balanced flow of information into, out of, and across the country, in accordance with a policy that respects the freedom of speech and of the press."

Excuse me?

This drivel in the supreme law of the Philippines belongs to a manual on how to write gibberish. The author of that atrocity must have thought he was writing for a spellbound posterity when what he was doing was contaminating the precious document with the virus of his pomposity. Verbosity is bad enough, ambiguity is even worse, but pollution of the Constitution with such rubbish is beyond penance or

In addition to the above defects, the Constirution of 1987 suffers from more substantiveshortcomings that demand rectification. Among these are the inclusion of party-list members in the House of Representatives, the submissiveness of the Judicial and Bar Council to the President, the lack of educational qualifications for elective officials, the permissive militarization of the civilian government, the useless and mocked imposition of elective term limits, the power of Congress to extend marrial law beyond the 60-day presidential period, the expensive senatorial elections nationwide instead of by districts, among many other

Justice Jose P. Laurel, one the distinguished framers of the Commonwealth Constitution, famously said that it was "lacking in perfection and perfectibility." The same well-meant criticism must apply as well to the also imperfect. Constitution of 1987. The problems it aspired to correct are still with us if they have not infact even exacerbated. It is clear that part of . the blame is traceable to the supreme law of the land the nation is now re-examining.

Many people, including me, are anxious to correct and improve the Constitution but not through the lawless method of the Cha-cha. Itwill aggravate the malady rather than heal it.

Presidential vs parliamentary system

THE DISCUSSIONS SO FAR ABOUT THE relative merits of presidential versus parliamentary form of government, particularly with respect to their impact on the economy, have been rather long on assertions and short on empirical evidence. I was familiar with only one study (it found that parliamentary governments have a tendency to have larger budget deficits than presidential) that was relevant to the issue. But not anymore, thanks to Noel de Dios, who put me on to another study, which led to even more studies.

Not that there is a wealth of literature on the subject. Only recently have economists started to directly address the question of how the constitution—in particular, electoral rules and form of government-affects economic performance and other policy outcomes. And not that there is complete unanimity among the researchers, either, or even consistency among results. But their findings shed more light on the issues, and improve the quality of the ongoing debate, as well as resolve some of the more outrageous claims.

The research findings below are those of economists Torsten Persson and Guido Tabellini, Persson is head of the Institute of International Economic Studies at Stockholm University and Tabellini is head of the Innocenzo Gasparini Institute for Economic Research at Milan's Bocconi University. They are co-authors of, among others, a book entitled "The Economic Effects of Constitutions," a couple of journal articles-"Constitutional Rules and Fiscal Policy Ourcomes" (AER 94, 2004) and "Constitutions and Economic Policy (Journal of Economic Perspectives, Winter 2004)—as well as a couple of NBER Working Papers: "Porms of Democracy, Policy and Economic Development" (Persson, WP 11171 March 2005) and Democracy and Development: The Devil in the Details" (WP 11991, January 2006).

Space limitations forbid anything but the briefest of summarles, but the reader is cautioned that the theoretical and empirical research is limited to two constitutional features: electoral rules (i.e., district magnitudes, electoral formulas-majoritarian vs. proportional, and ballot structure), and form of government (parliamentary, presidential). Of necessity, the electoral rules will be less emphasized in this column. What are the findings?

1. With respect to political accountability (this refers to voters' control over politicians who abuse their power as well as the voters' ability to select the most "able" candidates), which affects the extent of corruption, It is pointed out that the greater the political accountability, the less the corruption or the greater the incentive for good behavior among

The theoretical priors are that accountability is likely to be stronger in a presidential than in a parliamentary form of government for two

(a) the chain of delegation is simpler and more direct in the former ("the scope for collusion is greater under parliamentary"), and (b) many presidential regimes have strong separation of powers, not only between the executive and the legislative, but also within the legisla-

What do the data show (83 democracies in the 1990s)? The data are consistent with the theory only to a degree, depending on the quality of democracy (as measured by constraints on the executive, political participation and other institutional data produced by Freedom House and the Polity IV project, all accessible in the internet). Among "good" democracies, presidential regimes have less widespread corruption than parliamentary systems, but the result does not hold among "bad" democracies. (Caution: The result for the "good" democracies is not very robust, because of too few observations. In the sample used, there were many more "bad" democracles, which lead the authors to say: "When it comes to the form of government, our knowledge is not yet precise enough to give a solid

The reader may conclude that the Philippines must be a "bad" democracy. What's the latest from Freedom House and Polity IV on Freedom House measures freedom according to two broad categories: political rights (PR) and civil liberties (CL), and rates councries annually on a scale of 1 (freest) to 7 (not free) in both of them. If the average of the two is between 1 and 2.5, the country is considered free; from 3 to 5.5, it is considered partly free; and from 5.5 to 7 it is not free. What is the rating of the Philippines? The 2006 Freedom in the World report (which covers the conditions in 2005) gives us a rating of 3, which means the country is "partly free," Previously (in the 2005, 2004, 2003 and 2002 reports-I could not access older reports), we were considered "free," with a rating of 2.5, but the authors dropped our PR rating from 2 to 3 in the latest survey.

The Polity IV contains coded annual information on regime and authority characteristics for all independent states (with greater than 500,000 population) in the global state system . for the years 1800-2003. On a scale of 0 (low), to 10 (high) for democracy (general openness. of political institutions), the Philippines' score is 8; on a scale of 0 (low) to 10 (high) for autocracy (general closedness of political institutions), our score is 0; on a scale of -10 (high autocracy) to +10 (high democracy), our score is

All of which means that we can consider ourselves among the "good" democracles. (Next week: form of government, policy and economic performance)

Erap complicates things for himself and cronies

tified at the Sandiganbayan that he opened the Jose Velarde account on behalf of two Chinesedescended businessmen-cronies, in order to help facilitate their loan applications. His amazing admission sounds quite naïve, but it's actually complicating for him and for his cronies as it opens them all to charges of graft and corruption. This makes me wonder whether he was properly advised by his highly paid lawyers. But then, when one thinks of it, how can be contravene Clarissa Ocampo's testimony that she was just a foot away when he signed the bank forms as Jose Velarde, except to try to sound quite innocent and naïve?

While the two chambers of Congress are locking horns over the manner of amending the Constitution, there are those who prefer to already examine its economic provisions to see in what areas the entry of foreign capital could be encouraged. This issue could actually be more madugo in the long run than the manner of amending the Charter, which is only being held hostage to the ambitions of some senators.

Charter Change Advocacy Commission member Romela Bengzon says that even if more than P100 billion could be collected from the amended VAT law and the "sin taxes," there still won't be enough to fund the country's economic development needs. She cites Neda data showing that from 2006 to 2010, P1.5 trillion would be needed for infrastructure projects alone, a figure bigger than the entire national budget for this year. Bengzon and many other Cha-cha advocates maintain that we should allow the entry of foreign capital in those areas of the economy that have remained closed to them, as only in this way can more jobs be created for our legions of unemployed and underemployed. Where do we get that kind of money here? she asks.

I agree. Lifting the restrictions on various aspects of our economy would help alleviate the perennial scarcity of jobs in the cities as well as in the countryside. There is fear about tackling this subject, however, because to some, it could mean open season for the plunder of precious national resources. But it is up to us Filipinos to put the necessary and reasonable restrictions. Let's consider how our prosperous neighbors in the region have sought to balance the need to attract foreign investors in a highly competitive world and protect their resources. Their experience is there for us to explore. We don't have to reinvent the wheel.

Last month, my husband and I and my sixter's family had occasion to visit some friends in Davao City. We hadn't been there since 1997 and we noted its enormous progress, especially in terms of infrastructure. Davao is considered one of the most livable cities in the country and even in the world, and it's easy to see why. It is a clean, green place with all the amenities of a big city such as big beautiful malls, restaurant-bar clusters and a thriving nightlife (most of the big shows in Manila go down there). But it has little of the traffic, polbutton and criminality of Metro Manila.

Two of the most popular places in Davao are Jack's Ridge, a cluster of restaurants on one of the city's many hills, that provides a spectacuiar view of the city, and the Eden Resort of Chito Ayala, which is a great place for nature-trippers. We also visited the breeding ground of the Philippine eagle and I was happy to see that the Eagle Foundation has run it very professionally. Many corporations and private individuals have sponsored the care of particular birds or contribute to the park's upkeep.

is its link-up with various countries abroad, through its beautiful international airport. When we were there, dignetaries from Palau, a group of islands in the Western Pacific about an hour and a half from Davao by air, were visiting. I note that Palau folks now fly to Davao on regular direct flights of Asian Spirit for educational, medical, thopping and tourism reasons. It's the fruit of 10 years of a working relationship between them. In turn, several thousand Filipino workers are gainfully employed in Palau, mainly in the big construction projects that have mushroomed since its independence from the United States in 1990.

One positive development in our society is that many well-to-do folks are now taking their obligation toward their less fortunate brethren more seriously. Take the case of Misn Wright Añover, who halls from Bacolod and lives in a plush subdivision in Alabang. Last year around this time, I wrote about her efforts to put up a day-care center, which she named after the founder of Opus Dei, St. Josemaria Escriva, in Barangay Langgam, a depressed area in San Pedro Tunasan, Laguna, five years ago. Due to the plea of the kids' parents, Mian eventually transformed the day-care center into a pre-school. Today, it has 60 pupils from ages 3 to 6 in three sessions. She also put up a livelihood training project for the kids' mothers, beginning with a high-speed sewing center.

Mian's in need of help to cover the P350 tuition and PE uniforms costing P250 for each child, or a total of P600 per child per year (cost of books will be subsidized by the local government starting this year). Last year, many bind-hearted readers responded to her plea for financial assistance for her lods, and this year she's again asking for help. Other kind souls may wish to concentrate on helping the kids' elder siblings who are in nearby elementary and high schools by sponsoring the cost of the lat-ter's school ID and basic supplies amounting to 9200 per student. Classes start June 5 for elementary and high school students, and June 13 for the Day Care Center. Call Mian Añover at Tel. Nos. 809-

'X-Men III': The power of choice

YOU HAVE STRUGGLED ALL YOUR LIFE WITH something that sets you apart, a characteristic that makes you "other" in a world where everybody else seems to belong.

Whatever it is-skin color, gender, sexual preference, disease, disability, circumstance of birth-if a "cure" for it was to emerge, would you jump at the chance? Would you go for the cure that would make you one of "them"? Or would you denounce the cure, refusing to give up the one thing that makes you unique and special? Conformity or individuality? Belonging or standing apart? These are the choices that confront the mutants in "X-Men. The Last Stand," presumably the last in a film trilogy based on one of the most popular and most beloved comics franchises.

The story are begins with a genetic mutation that gives certain humans superhuman abilities, abilities that hold the potential for either much good or much evil. The X-Men franchise tracks two opposing threads for the mutant community, each one headed by a charismatic, powerful figure. One story thread leads to Xavier's School for the Gifted, an academy established by Professor Charles Xavier (Patrick Stewart) to train mutant youngsters in harnessing their gifts to do good, disciplining their powers and learning how to live in a human milieu. The other thread is held by Magneto (Ian McKellen), who has long resented humans' fear and loathing for mutants, believing that mutants should use their powers to assert themselves and indeed even dominate humanity.

THE TWO opposing sides of the mutant community unite when Worthington Labs develops the "cure," taken from the DNA of a boy named Leech who can drain a mutant's powers with a mere touch.

What motivates Warren Worthington II. head of Worthington Labs, to invest billions into developing the cure? Alas, his reasons are far from altruistic; as it turns out, he is motivated mainly by his desire to turn his son Angel (Ben Foster) into a "normal" young man, to make him shed his wings that give him the power to fly.

ple?) are concerned about what the availability of the cure means to their community, and are incensed when they find out that darts loaded with the "cure formula" have been developed as a weapon against lawless mutants. Magneto, on the other hand, immediately concludes that the "cure" was developed to wipe them out, and immediately uses it as a rallying cry to unite the scattered mutant forces and destroy the labs-located in the once-impregnable Alcatraz-developing the cure and housing its

A side story concerns Jean Gray (Famke Janssen), a powerful telekinetic with telepathic abilities, who is believed to have sacrificed elf to save the other X-Men in "X-Men IL" But it turns out that she has been resurrected as "Dark Phoenix," her alter ego, which Professor Xavier had buried in her subconscious mind because Phoenix represented the wild, uncontrollable and powerful aspect of her powers (just how powerful the world will soon discover to its dismay)

How the other X-Men-from old favorites like "Wolverine" (Hugh Jackman), "Storm" (Halle Berry), "Rogue" (Anna Paquin), "Cyclops" (James Marsden), to new characters like "Beast" (Kelsey Grammer, in a bit of surprise but successful casting) and "Kitty Pryde" (Ellen Page)—deal with the dilemma presented by the cure, as well as with their conflicting emotions regarding the "new" Jean Gray, especially Wolverine who has been in love with her for a long time, makes for an emotionally resonant film.

Professor Xavier and the other X-Men (X-Peo- "THE CURE is the real villain of the story," Berry tells an interviewer. "It's an issue I've struggled with my entire life. When I was a child, I felt that if only I could change myself, my life would be better. As I've gotten older, I've come to terms with what utter nonsense that is, and this movie adds light to that dark subject."

it's a view McKellen shares. "It's abhorrent to me," he says. "As it would be if a person said I need curing of my sexuality (he has been quite open about his homosexuality), or if someone said that black people could take a pill that would 'cure' them of being black."

Jackman, though, suggests the issue is more complex than it appears. There's another side of it to explore. Look at Rogue ... her abilities (to absorb the powers of other mutants which could result in death) are amazing, yet she lives a very lonely life She can never touch anyone, have a physical relationship, or have children. As politically abhorrent as the cure is, it's also understandable that someone like her would consider taking it."

in a world where genetic modification and stemcell research makes the "cure" no longer as absurd or fantaszic as it might have been, "X-Men: The Last Stand" crosses the line from comic-book funtasy to social (and scientific and political) reality.

AND so we go back to the original question. If a cure for your condition exists, would you take it? If you wanted to alter something you were born with-your height, your bust size, your teeth, your skin color-would you? For many people the answer is an unqualified yes, and they have taken the cure, or the many versions of it, from vitamins to orthodontics to cosmetic surgery.

But what if your condition was far more fundamental to who you are? What if it was your sexuality? Would you go for the "cure" offered by any number of religious groups who believe sexual preference can be altered by counseling and prayer? Or would you assert that bemg gay or lesbian or bisexual was part of the warp and woof of your personality?

Whether mutant or human, making a decision has never been easy or clear-cut. What is most important, though, is knowing you have choices and enjoy the freedom to choose.

THERE'S A GROUP OF SOCIAL CRITICS, MANY OF THEM veterans of failed administrations or former youth activists in their own right, who have taken to task the present generation of middle-class youth for their shortcomings. They take our seemingly nonexistent reaction to the political turnoil as a sign of a generational disease variously called ignorance, apathy and indifference.

I am a young man myself, I come from a middle-class family and I'm tired of

YOUNG BLOOD

Don't be misled by Martin Villanueva our seemingly nonex-

We want to know what the young face of the country's are thinking about. What are their problems. To believe thoughts on current issues? We that we are blind to welcome contributions from the our country's situatwentysomething and below.-Ed. tion is frankly insulting. We know, we're disgusted and we're turned off. And this is the reason for our

"monexistent" reaction. Are we not a passionately nationalistic generation? they ask. Well, in defense of my peers, many of us were among the middle-class youth who were in Edsa II. Whether we like it or not, this was our generation's People Power. Excuse us for not taking to the streets again this time, especially when we see the ridiculous redundancy of this practice of holding mass actions, which have produced so little change. Pessimustic we may be, but this definitely cannot be described as apathy. In fact, I regard this as a sign of maturity.

We're sick and tired of investing our energies in fighting a system which has never translated criticism into change Naturally, we drift back to our own interests. If this is a fault, it's a fault we share with others who are no longer young and who do not belong to the middle class. For every underprivileged Filipino who takes to the streets to fight for change, there are many more self-absorbed Filipinos who happen to be unproductive employees, vice-addicted spouses, abusive parents and undisciplined citizens.

At least the "lack of involvement" of the young middle class that I interact with can be rationalized as a proper way to channel our energies. Some of my college friends are prone to saying, "We have no time to rally." But behind such seeming indifference is a genuine concern to strive to meet our obligations. Many of us simply want to fulfill our primary duty as young citizens, which is to be good students. And by doing so, we seek to seize the opportunity most young men and women of our generation do not have.

Taking this course puts us in a better position to help the country in the long run. Business majors go on to create their own enterprises that help our economy while creating more and better job opportunities for our countrymen. Science majors continue to make possible progress in their field that improves the quality of life. Liberal arts majors (myself included) continue to study and promote the humanities, which help enrich our arts and our culture. (Consider the youth's contributions to the resurgence of OPM and Philippine cinema, for example.)

Sure, we keep to our own world and often just pursue our personal inclinations. But by giving the system a cold shoulder, I think we are helping build a self-sustaining citizenry. And that is true People Power

The outrage toward and protest against an oppressive system by the youth of the 1970s and 1980s are very well known. Their actions and the consequences they had to suffer made them heroes. But if the ways they tried to solve national problems were the most appropriate and the best, why does our own generation have to deal with the same problems of the same formidable magnitude, with only the principal characters changing?

The germ of the conflict is not only alive, it continues to flourish. Even as time changed, one constant has remained to block the process of healing; our reluctance to change our own ways. Our own generation (or at least the young men and women I interact with) sees this, and we've subconsciously decided to attack the problem in another way.

When we point an accusing finger at corrupt government officials, we want to be sure that we ourselves aren't corrupt citizens. We, the middle-class youth, are trying to right the wrongs of a tainted culture by doing our own thing, making sure we can handle that reality before we start blaming other people, like those in government.

Is this extreme? Perhaps. Is a self-interested culture good? Maybe not. But with the proper guidance that our predecessors are supposed to give us (as opposed to criticism), thus radical approach might work. Maybe we can become citizens working primarily for the betterment of self and family at no expense to the quality of life of our fellow Filipinos. That's an ideal worth striving for

This is where many of us "young, apathetic, middle class Filipinos" stand. Times are different, so we're doing things in a different way. We're trying to create an ideal world where government's power over us is minimal. I think many of us, regardless of age and social status, would love to create and live in such a Utopia

Should the troops come home now?

LAST WEEKEND'S ANNOUNCEMENT THAT fraqi lawmakers have finally formed a unity government is welcome news, both for Iraq and for US President George W. Bush and British Prime Minuster Tony Blair. The American and British governments, increasingly unpopular at home, desperately needed some tangible evidence of progress to assuage their domestic critics and to begin to speak openty of an exit strategy.

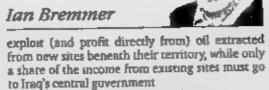

But Iraq's greatest challenges lie ahead. If Bush and Blair deciare victory before the real battles have begun, they will undermine the very process to which both have committed so much at such

Bush waited weeks for a positive development that would allow him to suggest he can reduce troop levels in Iraq from 133,000 to 100,000 by the end of 2006. Blair, still string by his Labour Party's defeat in local elections in early May, also welcomed the good news from Iraq. During a triumphal surprise visit to Baghdad on May 22, be said he expected lraque forces to take responsibility for "territorial security" in much of the country by the end of the year. "It is the violence that keeps us here," he said. "It is the peace that allows us to go."

The optimism is premature. The formation of a unity government is only the first of many hurdles lraq's new government must clear if it is to build a durable peace. Its first task will be to remove those provisions of frag's constitution that pit frag's Sunni, Shia and Kurds against one another. Under current Iraqi law, the parliamentary committee charged with making these constitutional changes has four months to complete its task. The fourmonth clock began ticking on May 3, following the first meeting of Iraq's new parliament The changes are budly needed. The committee must enact a new hydrocarbon law that guarantees each of iraq's factions a fair share of the country's oil wealth, which accounts for 97 percent of tota, export revenue. Under the current constitution, local governments have the right to

WORLD VIEW

On May 15, two small independent energy companies (Turkey's Genel Enerji and Canada's Addax Petroleum) became the latest foreign firms to begin drilling in Kurdish-controlled territory under an agreement with the regional government. Kurdish politicians within the new parliament have good reason to protect these lucrative deals as debate begins over constitutional changes

But the central government will need a large share of that income if it is to finance the construction of new institutions of governance, invest in critical infrastructure, undertake onerous reforms aimed at economic liberalization and provide the resource-poor (and already restive) Summis of central leaq with a greater share of the

The constitution must also be amended to reverse the worst effects of a de-Baathalication process that aimed to dismantle the vesuges of Saddam Hussein's regime. In practice, de-Baathification has excluded thousands of iraqis-most of them Sunnis who joined the party during the Saddam era only to secure good jobs-from the country's political and economic life

Pinally, the Iraqi government must begin dismantling the militis groups that still outgun the fledgling Iraqi army, and it must defeat the largely Sunni-led insurgency. Each of these tasks is formidable. If Bush and Blair prematurely withdraw large numbers of the troops that support Iraqi stability, the country's new government would have limbe chance of success.

There is some reason for optimism that efforts to stem the tide of violence can succeed. Media reports of Iraqi bloodshed focus overwhelmingly on Baghdad—where the large majority of foreign journalists are based-creating the impression that the desperate security situation there is representative of the country as a whole. But in the Kurdish-controlled areas of the north and Shiftedominated provinces in the south, levels of crime and deadly violence compare favorably with those in many cities in the United States.

But attacks in Iraq's "Sunni triangle" (and Baghdad, in particular) occur at a rare rivaling those in Chechnya and the Niger Delta. Since Sunni militants destroyed the Shiite Askariya mosque in Pebruary, hundreds of Iraqis have been killed in a series of tit-for-tat sectarian attacks. Tens of thousands have fled from mixed Sunni-Shifte cities to safer havens in ethnically homogenous enclaves that are effectively controlled by Sunni and Shifte militias. Only the presence of foreign troops slows the further balkanization of the country's already fractious politics.

That's why the temptation for Bush and Blair to limit further political damage at home by prematurely declaring victory in Iraq is so dangerous. If they use the good news to begin withdrawing significant numbers of the foreign troops who bolster fraq's stability at a crucial and vulnerable moment, they will have undermined the project to which both have devoted so much political capital. And they will leave the new Iraqi government at the mercy of forces that would eventually Project Syndicate pull the country apart.

Why hearing of NorthRail case was suspended

IN THE INTEREST OF FAIRNESS. please allow us to correct the false allegations raised by Victor Agustin in his column "Derailed complaint," regarding the case filed by Prof. Harry L. Roque Jr. and other parties against the NorthRail project. (PDI, 5/8/06)

It is not true that Judge Gesar Santamaria, who presides over Branch 145 of the Makati City Regional Trial Court, indefinitely suspended the hearing on the NorthRail case because he was irked that Roque flew to the United States "without a by-your leave."

If Agustin did his own research, he would have known that during that hearing, the Office of the Solicitor General and the Office of the Government Corporate Counsel, as well as the lawyers for the Chinese interests, filed a barrage of motions, all wanting to immediarely dismiss the case. In fact, the judge repeatedly said during the hearing that he did not see why the summary hearing should not proceed, as there was a legal ground for it.

On account of the pending mo-tions, the judge granted all the parties to the case time to answer each other's written pleadings.

Moreover, there is no rule of court that requires a petitioner to seek leave of court before leaving the country. A party has only to be personally present in the proceedings when he is specifically required by the court. Otherwise, he may be represented by counsel.

While it is true that Roque flew to the United States, he did so to represent the country in the prestigious international law Jessup Moot Court competitions, he being the coach of the UP Law Jessup Team, the country's official representative to this year's competitions. It was a matter of national pride that he had to attend the previously scheduled event.

Our contention is that there are no factual lasues in the case but merely legal ones. Hence, we do not even need witnesses, only stipulations as to the legal issues in dispute. We only had one witness—one of the petitioners in the case-to restify that we taked for certified true copies of the relevant documents from concerned government agencies, a request that these agencies have denied

Alternative medicine a threat to PMA 13

PHILIPPINE MEDICAL Association (PMA) has expressed grave concern about the promotion of food supplements, herbal preparations and alternative health care modalities as cures for all types of illnesses. In fact, the PMA is, for obvious reasons, just concerned that people are getting tired of chemical-laced toxic medicines, invasive surgical methods (which have many side effects) and high-cost and unaffordable drugs.

People are going for new, costeffective, humanistic preventive type of healing modelities and nutritional supplements. Under House Bill 564, also known as the "Magna Carta for Patients" (approved on the subcommittee level last March), patients have freedom to choose the medicines they Everybody knows that the Philippine health system cannot adequately meet the country's health care requirements. That is why hilots and herbotarias are popular with financially disadvantaged Phipinos. Besides, folk medicine is part of our rich herltage and culture.

Has the PMA addressed the shortage of medicines and health care services? I believe the PMA nceds to rescarch, examine and evoluate alternative ways of healing. For example, mere are raports that Queen Elizabeth of the United Kingdom uses homeopathic medicine and other nutridonal food supplements; and that Prince Charles has a favor-

MISUARI remains a force to be reckoned with as an OIC team wants to meet him to assess the success of the 1996 peace agreement that Misuari's MNLF signed with the government then under Fidel Ramos.

MILF wants in on talks with OIC in Jeddah

COTABATO CITY-THE MORO Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) should not be sidelined during 14. They were aboard a truck and the scheduled meeting between government officials, Nur Misuari and the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC), a rebel spokesperson said.

Bid Kabalu said that while the MILP agrees that the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) is important in the pursuit of peace in Mindanao, "the MILF is also equally important."

Kabalu said they wanted to attend the July tripartite meeting in Jeddah because the ongoing peace negotiations between the government and the MILF could be on the agenda.

The imparite meeting was aimed at ironing out kinks in the implementation of the peace agreement that the government and Misuan signed in 1996.

The other rebel

Like the 1996 peace agreement, the OIC is also behind the peace negotiations between the government and the MILF.

But Kabalu said much as they wanted to be present in the tripartite meeting in Jeddah, "It is up for the government and the OIC to decide."

"The MILF's presence must be considered, but we cannot invite ourselves to be part of that meeting. The invitation should come from the government and the OIC," Kabalu said.

During the Jeddah meeting, the government, the MNLF and the 57-member pan-Islamic body, were expected to discuss the result of the assessment made by an OIC team on the implementation of the 1996 peace agreement.

Mindanao tour

The OIC team went around several Mindanso provinces and cities last week and found out there were some provisions in the agreement that were not being implemented.

"Our brothers in the MNLF are absolutely right in demanding for the full implementation of this accord and we understand their predicament. Ten years of intense waiting is long enough, it is easy to understand why there is restiveness in their ranks," Mohagher lqbal, MILF chief negotiator, said.

lobal said among the provisions in the peace agreement that are not being implemented are the appointment of MNLF leaders in the Cabinet and the provision on socioeconomic aid package, particularly for lower-ranked commanders of the rebel group. BAGUIO CITY A JUDGE IN BENGUET HAS ruled that policemen have illegally arrested 11 youths whom lawmen linked to the Feb. 10 raid of a military detachment in Mankayan town by communist rebels.

May 19, Judge Agapito Laoagan Jr of the regional trial court in Bugulas town quashed the govemment's evidence against the youths, who include a 16-yearold girl from Marikina City and a 17 year-old boy from Pasig City.

A joint task force composed of members of the Benguet police mobile group and an Army unit intercepted the group, known as "Punks 11," in Buguias on Feb.

in a nine-page order issued on were on their way to Sagada, Mr. Province, when arrested.

The judge said police could not justify the warrantiess arrest of the two minors and their friends Anderson Alonzo, 18, and Jethro Villagracia, 21, of Davao City; Ron Pandino, 19, of Laguna, Darwin Alagar, 20, of Pangasinan, A.duz Christian Mañosa, 18, Jefferson de la Rosa, 20, and Neil Russel Balajadia, 25, of Pasig City, Arvie Nuñez, 21, of Lucena City; and Rundren Lao, 24, of Davao City.

nesses identified the youths as crime la fact, they became aware members of the group who attacked the Army detachment. But the witnesses appeared in a police beadquarters in Bugusas only after the group had been arrested.

"In warrantless arrests under Section 5, paragraph b of Rule 113 of the Rules of Court, which is otherwise referred to as a hot pursuit' arrest, it is required that the arresting officer has probable cause," Laoagan wrote.

He said "the accused were arrested four days after the alleged

"Furthermore, the arresting officers were not present and were of the identities of the accused as the perpetrators of the incident only after the witnesses identified them," he said.

The judge also noted that while the government case against the group relies on witnesses' testimonies, "raw intelligence information is not sufficient ground for a warrantiess arrest."

But Lacagan rold the Incures on Finday that his order stopped short of directing the immediate release of 10 of the detained youths.

But new court procedures issued in 2000 no longer make this practice an automatic consequence once evidence against the detainees are quashed, he said.

He said his order grants the government prosecutor 15 days to review his procedures, and conduct a new preliminary investigation "so they [the detained youths] can properly submit their counter-affidavits."

Lao's circumstances are different, however, Laoagan said Lao had alerted the National Bureau of Investigation and the Department of Social Welfare and Development about the youths' arrest when he escaped from Camp Molintas on the day of his arrest and fled to Baguio.

BACOLOD CITY—The Couples for Christ in Negros Decidental is calling on its members not to see the movie "The Da Vinci Code," which it called biasphemous and an attack on the Catholic faith. "The best response is not to see the movie. Do not contribute your money to funding the secular and liberal forces, especially in media, that seek to weaken or destroy what we hold dear," a CFM-Negros statement said. The film, based on the international best-selling novel of the same name by Dan Brown, has become a box office hit worldwide, despite calls for a boycott of the movie. "Some say it should not affect the faith of those who are well grounded. But that is not the point. The point is that it is biasphemous and so we should reject it," the CFM statement said. ### OFW deployment stopped DAVAO CITY-The deployment of at least 314 Filipino medical workers to Libya was delayed after the Libyan government adopted a new system for hiring foreign and local workers, the Department of Labor and Employment said. Ciling a report from the Tripoi -based Phi, ppine Overseas Labor Office, the DOLE said the creation of a central committee replaced the decentralized system previously adopted in Libya. Labor Attaché to Libya Jaime Gimenez said in that report that the central committee, which is under Libya's General People's Committee for Manpower Training and Employee ment, has taken over the power to hire medical workers from the shealblyya or Libyan municipalities. Bimenez said the 314 Filipinos were aiready scheduled for deployment but, because of the new system, only 151 job orders had been approved. The central committee, he said, decided that only those bound for the Tripoll Medica: Center and the Esbea Military Hospital would be hired at the moment. A total of 5,328 OFWs were deployed to Libya in 2005, most of them medical workers.

CHR to probe shooting of civilians in town where Army was shot at

By Nestor P. Burgos jr. PDI Visayas Bureau

ILOILO CTTY-THE COMMISSION on Human Rights (CHR) has started investigating the shooting of civilians by soldiers in San Remigio town in Antique early this month.

CHR investigator Edgar Luis said they will determine if the shooting was a result of a "legitimate firefight" between soldiers and other armed groups.

"We would determine if the civilians' rights were violated because they are not members of any armed group," Lois told the Incorrer in a telephone interview.

Epifania Cabaya, 65, died and four of her family members, in-cluding two children, were wounded after soldiers fired upon villagers of Barangay Panpanan I in San Remigio on May 5.

The Army's Task Force Panay (TFP) had said that armed villagers fired upon the soldiers and that the two groups mistook each other for communist rebels.

'School for Excellence' for village kids

By Vicente S. Labro Ormoc City

YEAR AGO, A STATE-OWNED POWER FIRM has dreamed of producing high-caliber graduates in seven years from the grade schools of two obscure villages atop one of the high mountains in Leyte. Now its dream is slowly turning into reality through a project dubbed as "School for Excellence."

EDC), which operates the country's largest geothermal field located in Leyte, is undertaking the School for Excellence project, in coordination with the education department and concerned local government units and the host communities.

The project beneficiaries are the children of poor upland farmers in PNOC-EDC's host communities-Barangay Tongonan in Orrace City and Barangay Tongonan in Kananga, Leyte, which are just about 300 meters away from each

Started last year and only for the preparatory and Grade 1 levels, the project already had 304 pupil-beneficiaries in the elementary school of Tongonan-Ormoc and 372 in Tongonan-Kananga with 16 teachers handling classes in the two grade

Paul A. Aquino, president and chief executive officer of PNOC-EDC, says his company wants to create a difference in their host communities, "and the best way we thought we could create that difference is by starting with the young citizens of Ormoc and Kananga."

"More than ensuring renable, cost-efficient and environmentfriendly energy for the Filipino people, we remain committed to helping the government improve the quality of life in the countryside through our Bank-Biyaya efforts," he emphasizes.

After conducting planning sessions and coordination with DepEd, the local government units and the Tongonan communities, PNOC-EDC eventually entered into a memorandum of agreement on May 27, 2005 with those concerned groups, and this concretized the school project that is now known as the School for Excellence.

"Our children in Ormoc and Kananga deserve to be given access to [the] future through brilliant trutiatives such as this Schools for Exceilence project that we have built in our host barangays," Aquino

Aquino explains that they opted to use the term "school for excellence" instead of "school of exceslence" because the former is pro-active "In other words, we are striving for excellence," he says.

"We adopted community-based eco-tourism because Concepcion is a nature and adventure destination. It is one of the few ptaces in Panay where the biodiversity of flora and fauna is high and the marine ecosystem is in a good state," said Mario Lazarito, 40, the mayor's development consultant and municipal tourism officer-designate.

Under the leadership of Mayor Raul Bensas, fast year's Rafael M. Salas awardee for Population and Development, Conception has had nine places classified as Manne Protected Areas (MPAS) with Barangay Polopiña in Igbon Island included in the MPAS on April 27 during the town's Tampesaw Pestival held in Most of the seagrass beds in the islands are intact and the coastal town has a west-preserved coral atoll in the 27-hectare Baseguian Isand that teems with marine life.

This same island that is two hours boat ride from the mainland, also houses one of the most modern maritime lighthouses in the country, constructed in 1998 with funding from the Japan Bank for Internagonal Cooperation, said Lazarito.

Town officials are hoping that the CBET will awaken Concepcion folks' awareness of preserving theur environment while getting income from its beauty.

"CBET was a program designed and implemented in 2002 to give capacities to local people to use indigenous and local resources," said Lazarito, who admits that there is still much to be done to develop the technical capability of Concepcion's CBET advocates.

Concepcion has two guides accredited by the Department of Tourism, nine are local guides with basic training and two are mountain guides for Pan de Azucar, which at 573 ft above sea level, can be scaled in three hours.

Rex Eusala, 50, one of the owners of the Sandber Island Beach Resort in Bulubadiangan Island is thankful for the CBET and attempts at putting more MPAs because these have stopped residents of neighboring islands from endiessly collecting the edible marine life in the five-

Some of the youth in the rally said in jest that the only way they could read the book was to pick up the torn pages and put them together

News of the book burning started to carculate in coffee shops about two weeks before the movie opened. The idea was first attributed to a group of Ateneo alumni who protested what they said was the book's attacks on the Catholic faith

Jesse Paredes, an Areneo alumnus and frequent bar customer in Malate, was being tout ed as the leader of the book burning movement, until Manila Mayor Lito Atienza embraced the idea and agreed to hold the prayer

"God is big in Manila," Paredes said.

He said the timing for the book burning yesterday was right.

The book burning came a day after Manila banned the showing of the movie on the strength of a resolution of the city council that said it was crime to "exhibit films that offend religion." SM Cinemas nationwide banned the movie.

The rally, impated by members of the St James Parish in Ayala, Alabang, drew about 500 people, mostly students, from schools and universities in Manila.

Palace considering ₱1-B package to help victims of pre-need firms

By Gil C. Cabacungan Jr.

MALACANANG IS CONSIDERING A PROPOsal to provide subsidies to some 100,000 victims of cash-strapped pre-need companies through a P1-billion increase in allocation to the Commission on Higher Education in this

But Budget Secretary Rolando Andaya was quick to point out that the additional funding for CHEd was not meant to bail out the troubled Pacific Plans Inc. and College Assurance Plan.

"[W]e want to stress that this is not a corporate bailout because we are only helping the victims as a stop-gap measure while their pre-need companies sort out their problems," Andaya said.

Under a proposal put forward by Albay Rep. Joey Salceda, CHEd would then instruct state colleges and universities to provide tuirion subsidy of P10,000 each to students who would show proof that they were among the victims of the failed pre-need companies. President Macapagal-Arroyo had previously approved the release of 2500 million to CHEd to boost us scholarship programs.

"With the school year opening, the preneed mess is likely to rage more than its usual intensity as more pre-need contracts become due, schools raise their tuition, gas stations raise their pump prices and other juicy issues affecting the administration subside," Saice da said.

According to Salceda, the Palace can lobby to increase the CHEd allocation when the bicameral conference committee begins discussion on the 2006 budget next month.

In a meeting with plan holders last year, the President said she would look into the possibility of tapping P1 billion in dividends from the Government Service and Insurance System to subsidize the fution and school miscellaneous of pre-need victims last year. But Ms Arroyo later learned that this diversion was not legal under government rules.

Last Wednesday, controversiai businessman Mark Jimenez pledged to donate P50 million to plan holders, who had organized themselves into Parents Enabling Parents Coaution to pursue their claims against PPI and CAP He said he was hoping this would start a campaign to raise funds for pre-need victims.

Hunger causing global instability, says Nobel laureate

A NOBEL LAUREATE SAID YESTERDAY THAT hunger is causing global instability and urged governments to spend more on food production.

"We still have a large number of miserable, hungry people, and this contributes to world instability," Norman Borlaug told an Asian Development Bank forum in Manila, "Human misery is explosive, and you better not forget that."

Bortaug, 92, won the Nobel Peace Prize In 1970 for improving crop management practices that transformed food production in much of the developing world. He developed a high-yield wheat that helped stop starvation in India and Pakistan in the 1960s. Borlaug said 56 percent of countries with the highest levels of hunger are wracked by civil wars.

He said governments should spend less on arms and more on agricultural research and infrastructure support to the countryside to boost food production.

Borlaug also criticized groups opposed to genatic engineering in plants and chemical fertilizers, saying new technology has dramatically increased food production and staved off hungar in many countries.

"If you stand still and don't change, with the population still growing-74 million more people every year---you are walking backward," he sald.

WHAT'S INSIDE

TO STATIST rerouting experiment along Shaw starts in June

No trace of missing Bayan member

By Luige A. del Puerto

A MILITANT PARTY-LIST GROUP YESTERday demanded that government security forces release, or at very the least, acknowledge that they have in their custody one of its members who was abducted last May 16 in Makati City

Witnesses said the men who snatched Rolando Porter in Makati City had identified themselves as law enforcers, a claim the police have denied.

Eyewitness

"We have strong suspicions that Isapf (Intelligence Service of the Armed Forces of the Philippines) and CIDG (Criminal Investigation and Detection Group) agents were the ones who abducted Porter," said Bayan Muna deputy secretary general Roberto de Castro.

Bayan Muna said that based on an eyewitness account, three men forced Porter into a waiting L300 van with license plate WAA 201 as he was buying a phone card for his mobile phone from a store at the corner of San Rafael and Sacramento streets in Barangay Olympia, a short walk from his house.

The manner in which the "Erap 5" were arrested in Quezon City on Monday indicated that government forces could also be behind Porter's abduction, De Castro said.

It took the military 48 hours to admit they had in its custody five supporters of former President Estrada who were arrested on Monday in Quezon City for allegedly being involved in a plot to assassinate several Cabinet officials

The five were freed Thursday night.

Porter's half-brother, Mario Bravo, said his disappearance might have something to do with his work at Bayan Muna, a militant organization often linked to left-leaning forces.

Ordeal

Upon learning of the Erap 5's ordeal, he said it was possible government forces could have taken his brother under their custody as

"That is how I feel. His group, Bayan Muna, is against the Gloria (Macapagal-Arroyo administration). They could have taken him," Bravo said

Bravo said he and members of the human rights group Karapatan would visit police precincts as well as Camp Crame and Camp Aguinaldo on Monday to try to locate his brother.

Lineup

In a text message yesterday, De Castro demanded that the government produce members of the team that arrested the "Erap 5."

"Witnesses in Porter's abduction may be able to identify those who took hum in a lineup," the Bayan Muna official said, adding that after hearing tales of torture from the "Erap 5," his group feared that Porter could be going through the same ordeal.

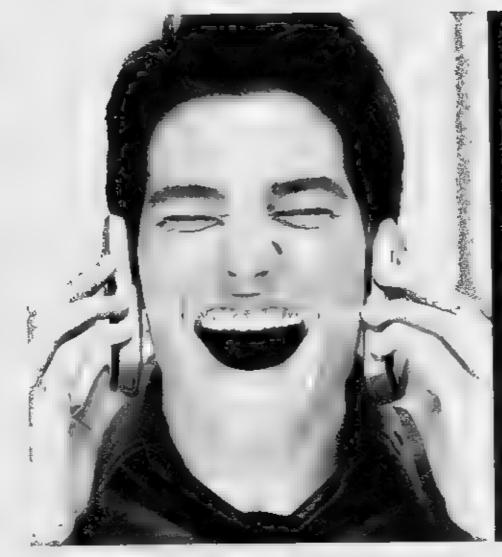

The government, he said, has no "moral ascendancy" at this time to deny Porter's abduction.

Commenting on the Porter case, Philippine National Police spokesperson Sr. Supt. Samuel Pagdilao Jr. said the police do not arrest people and hide the act

Charges

"If there is a warrant for the arrest, we bring him (or her) to the court that usued the warrant. If it is a warrantless arrest, we file charges within the required period," he

Pagdilao said that as far as Porter was concerned, he had not received a report that a powce unit had arrested the missing Bayan Muna member

Based on 25 years of satellite data, researchers at the University of Washington also determined that the jet streams a pattern of westerly winds that help drive weather in both hemispheres-have shifted about 70 miles (112.7 km) toward their respective poles.

This is important because the southern China and north Africa jet streams mark the northern and southern boundaries of the tropic climate zones, said John

The research is not predictive, but does show a long-term trend, Wallace said by telephone.

"If (this jet-stream shift) is going to stop and it just ends up being 70 miles (112.7 km), that's not a big deal," he said. "But if it were to continue at the same rate over the next century, then that

The dry subtropical climate regions, which contain some of the world's major deserts, could encroach into temperate regions, Wallace said. Areas such as the Mediterraneau, southern Europe and the northern part of the Middle East could have a tendency toward more drought, Wallace said.

The same might happen in southern Australia and South Africa, he said.

The study does not address whether this warming is due to the greenhouse effect or some other factor. It is different from previous models, which saw the fastest warming in the tropics, rather than the subtropics

In Japan, ex-Livedoor execs admit to fraud

TOKYO--FORMER EXECUTIVES of the once high-flying Internet firm Livedoor admitted Friday to fraud allegations as they went on trial for a scandal that rocked Japan's financial and political circles.

The four executives, once known for their casua, dress and brash ways, wore dark suits and looked humbly at the ground as prosecutors read charges of hiding financial losses

"In principle, I acknowledge that the facts in the indictment are correct," Ryon Miyauchi, Livedoor's 38-year-old former chief financial officer, told the Tokyo District Court.

"I am examining myself over the crime I have commutted I feel very sorry for causing trouble to many people," he said

The three other executives-Fumito Kumagai, Fumito Okamoto and Osanari Nakamura-also admitted all or part of the charges. However, two accountants who are also on trial denied they cooked the books

The former top executives are expected to allege wrongdoing by Livedoor's flamboyant founder, Takafum: Horie, whose trial is expected in July.

The spiky-haired 33 year-old used to be a media darling for mounting aggressive, after unsuccessful, takeover bids and showing up at Japan's formal corporate board rooms in a T-shirt.

Prosecutors said the four execatives on trial Friday "conspired" with Horie and falsely reported 5.03 billion ven ($45 million) in pretax profit for the year to September 2004 to hide actual losses of some 300 million yen at the company.

Probe expected to show Marines killed Iragis

WASHINGTON-A military investigation into the deaths of two dozen fragis last November is expected to find that a small number of Marines in western Iraq carried out extensive, unprovoked killings of civillans, said congressional, military and Pentagon officials on Thursday. Two lawyers involved in discussions about individual Marines, defenses said they thought the investigation could result in charges of murder, a capital offense. That possibility and the emerging details of the killings have raised fears that the incident could be the gravest case involving misconduct by American ground forces in Iraq. Officials briefed on preliminary results of the inquiry said the civilians killed at Haditha, a lawiess, insurgent-plagued city deep in Senm-dominated Anbar Province, did not die from a makeshift bomb, as the military first reported, or in cross-fire between Marines and attackers, as was later announced. A separate inquiry has been started to find whether the events were deliberately covered up. Evidence indicates that the civilians were killed during a sustained sweep by a small group of Marines that lasted three to five hours and included shootings of five men standing near a tax. at a checkpoint and killings inside at least two homes that inc and children, officials said.

Pope says Mass at Warsaw square

Benedict XVI celebrated Mass for an estimated 270,000 people Friday in a rain-drenched Warsaw square where his predecessor, tarpaulins for rain cover, and peo-John Paul II, inspired Poland's Solidanty movement against communist rule in a historic 1979

People lined the street to wave and cheer as Benedict's popemobile passed, and church bells pealed. An aide held an umbrella as Benedict ascended a high Mass platform topped by a 25-meter metal cross.

Spectators stood resolutely in ponchos and under umbrellas, filling vast Pilsudski Square before the 9:30 a.m. start, deternuned to see Benedict pay tribute to his friend and mentor-a main theme of his trip to Poland Aneta Owczarek, 18, dripping wet without a raincoat, said she wouldn't consider going inside.

"No way," she said. "This is one of the most important events that - crowd estimate.

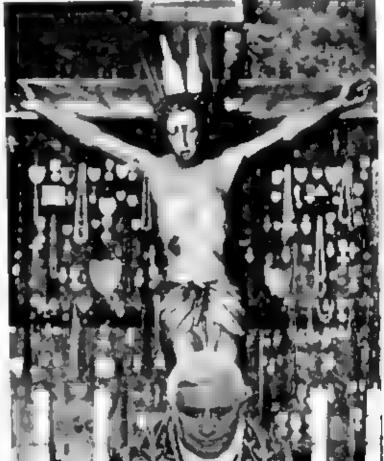

POLAND-POPE could ever happen in Poland and we don't know if we'll ever see the Pope here again."

Scouts distributed Boy ple climbed on fences and sang along with the choir.

The choice of site for the Mass recalled John Paul II's bold call to "renew the face of this land" at the square, then called Victory Square, during his triumphant first visit to his native land after being elected Pope

His appearance challenged the atheist communist authorities and is credited by Solidarity founder Lech Walesa with energizing the emerging trade union resistance to Soviet-backed communist rule, which collapsed in 1989-90.

The crowd was less than in 1979, when some 300,000 people jammed the square, with some 750,000 in the surrounding streets. Police spokesperson Pawel Biedziak provided Friday's

Bush, Blair acknowledge mistakes, defend Iraq war

WASHINGTON—US PRESIDENT George W. Bush and British Prime Minister Tony Blair bluntly acknowledged that the Iraq war had been marked by "mistakes" and "missteps" but insisted that the world must support the new Baghdad government.

During an extraordinary 50-minute White House press conference Thursday, the political brothers-in-arms expressed distress at many aspects of the campaign which brought down Saddam Hussein but also undermined their own popularity

Bush expressed regret for the Abu Ghraib prison scanda, and some of his tough talking comments

Blair said the "de-Baathification" of Iraq—the clearing out of Saddam followers—had been badly handled.

BUSH and Blair (left) at the White House East Room press conference.

There was none of the determined bravado that marked earlier press conferences after their regular meetings over the past three years.

"No question that the Iraq war has created a sense of consternation here in America," said Bush. "I mean, when you turn on your TV screens and see innocent people die day in and day out, it affects the mentality of our country."

"Not everything since liberation has turned out as the way we had expected or hoped We've learned from our mistakes, adjusted our methods and have built on our successes," said the US president Bush said he should not have made gung-ho comments such as "bring 'em on" when referring to the insurgents in July 2003 as the attacks on US troops and fraq. civilians mounted "I learned some lessons about expressing myself maybe in a little more sophisticated manner" he declared

Both Bush and Blair have seen their public standings collapse over the past year, in large part because of the war, but both insist they were right to order the March 2003 invasion.

"The decision to remove Saddam Hussein from power was controversial. We did not find the weapons of mass destruction that we all believed were there, and that's raised questions about whether the sacrifice in Iraq has been worth it," Bush said

"Despite setbacks and missteps, I strongly believe we did and are doing the right thing,"

Bush refused to set a timetable for the withdrawal of the 135,000 US troops in fraq, insisting "we will keep the force level there necessary to win."

With a majority of US public opinion now against the war, Bush said, "It's important for the American people to know that politics sn't going to make the decision as to the size of our force level."

It could be Blair's last visit to White House

By Jennifer Loven

WASHINGTON—THE BRITISH PRESS ACcompanying Prime Minister Tony Biair to the White House seemed to take it for granted that he isn't long for his world leader role. Only President George W. Bush protested—even Blair never bothered to correct them

Blair never bothered to correct them
"Wait a minute," Bush said after a second question from the British side assumed Blair's departure as fact.

Blair's government has lurched from crisis to crisis in recent weeks, and his Labor Party suffered a severe setback in recent local elections. Blair has said he will not stand in the next general election slated for 2010, but members of his own party have called on him to issue a timetable for departing sooner.

Though Blair has not done so publicly, it was reported over the weekend in Britain that Biair has told munisters that he plans to leave office next summer. Biair's office has refused to confirm the arrangement

One British reporter asked Biair cheekily if his talk about the necessity of vigorous leadership at the United Nations amounts to a job application. The British leader said it wasn't, but then expounded at length on the need for strong international institutions and used the nuclear standoff with Iran as an example.

Later in the hourlong news conference that alternated between questions from the US and British media, another member of Biair's press corps started with "Prime Minister, this is possibly your last official visit to Washington as prime minister." The reporter asked both leaders what they will miss about each other

"I'll miss those red ties is what I'll miss," said the US president, looking at his colleague in blue shirt and red tie and then turning more serious about perhaps the most steadfast ally he has in the world."

"Don't count him out—let me tell it to you that way." Bush said, "I know a man of resolve and vision and courage, and I—my attitude is I want him to be here so long as I'm the president."

Strange, Chang share halfway 1-stroke lead

By Musong R. Castillo

JUVIC PAGUNSAN MADE THE adjustments early Thursday evening, shook off the jitters yesterday, and for the third straight year made himself a hot contender in the Philippine Open.

Pagunsan assumed his place on the leaderboard as the top Filipino pro after a 2-under-par 70 gave him a share of fourth spot halfway through the $200,000 Asian Tour event, just four shots off the lead jointly held by Australian Scott Strange and Taiwanese Chang Ting-yeh.

In only his second start as a pro in his native soil, Pagunsan muted six birdies with four bogeys to join 2003 champ Rick Gibson (72) and Soc Kyaw Naing of Myanmar at 142.

The bogeys I made were all because of bad luck," Pagunsan, the low amateur and a top 10 finisher in the last two years, told the Inquires in Filipino. "They were lip-outs, had bounces, etc. With back in the weekend, I'd say we have a pretty good chance at making a run at the tide again." The 28-year-old was one of 16 local bets who made it to weekend play as 30 of their countrymen fell short of the cut pegged at 150-sixover-including former winner Cassius Casas, whose second round 78 gave him a 157.

Strange, meanwhile, played steady for the second straight day and fired a 70. But he missed the solo lead with a bogey on the 18th after his grip slipped a little on his downswing in his approach.

1993 champion at Southwoods who fired a 69, which England's Chris Rodgers duplicated move up to solo third, one shot back at 139

Yeh made up for an atrocious day off the tee by using just 24 putts, while Rodgers had six birdies against three bogeys.

TURIN, ITALY -IT WAS DARWIN LAYLO'S turn to share in round 5 Thursday when he extracted the full point that enabled the Philippines to salvage a 2-2 tie with Lithuania in the 37th Chess Olympiad at the Olympic Village here.

Deftly handling black, the two-time national champion downed Fide Master Airidas Savickas in 64 moves of a Scandmavian defense to compensate for the loss of Grandmaster Mark Paragua on board 1.

The third draw against lower-ranked opponents pulled down the Filipmos to a share of 48th-56th places in the men's division

The Filipinas, on the other hand, continued their seesaw campaign by besting Italy B, 2.5-0.5, and climbing to joint 34th-41st.

The 25-year-old Laylo, who hails from Lipa, Batangas, was two pawns up and threatening mate with his queen and king when Savickas finally resigned.

GAMES TODAY (Dilvarez Sports Center) 2 p.m. - Montaña vs Harbour Centre 4 p.m.—Toyota Otls vs Rain or Shine

TOYOTA OTIS, THE REVELATION OF THE tournament, tries to sustain its inspired form against Rain or Shine at the start of their best-of-five semifinal series today in the PBL Unity Cup.

"They're in high spirits, they're well motivated," noted eoach Leo Austria, whose Elasto Painters will be the slight underdogs against the Sparks in their 4 p.m. duel at the Ohvarez Sports Center in Parañaque.

The Montaña Jewels, who chinched the

No. 2 semifinal seeding behind the Sparks, will also face the similarly inspired Harbour Centre Portmasters in the other semis showdown earlier at 2 p.m.

Barely making it to the quarterfinal playoffs, the Portmasters overcame Granny Goose's twice-to-beat advantage to complete the Final Four cast.

So expectedly, coach Jorge Gallent plans to stick to his game plan that turned the Portmasters into formidable contenders after a disma) start.

"We're doing very little adjustments for the game against Montaña," said Gallent. They have deadly shooters, so we just have to stay in the game. If not, it will be hard for us to beat Montaña."

Coach Nel Parado knows that the Jewels' elimination-round sweep of the Portmasters hardly matters since Joseph Yeo, LA Tenorio and Chico Lanete have been unstoppable for Harbour Centre recently.

Although the Jewels have been turning to Alex Compton for leadership, Montaña's strength lies in its balanced of fense. In fact, none of the Montaña players averages in double figures thus confer-tournament to send to the Adidas Superstar Camp where they undergo training under world experts and get the chance to play two-on-two with NBA cagers.

This year, the anointed ones were 6foot 5 Vince Fran of La Salle Greenhills, son of former PBA cager Raymund Fran, and 6-foot Kevin John Gamboa of Ateneo. The two left for Beijing this week to join 62 other players (aged 18 and below) from all over Asia, in the 5-day basketball camp.

Aside from honing their skills and learning something new, Vince and Kevin will aspire to make it to the All-Star team which will undergo further training in Atlanta, Georgia in July.

The All-Stars will be composed of 10 players culled from a group of 24 semifinalists who participated in the Beljing camp. The Philippines' Ken Barracoso made it to this group two years ago in Shanghai.

At the Camp, we had the chance to interview NBA cagers Dwight Howard of the Orlando Magic and TJ Ford of the Milwaukee Bucks, Tracy McGrady's personal trainer Wayne Hall, and legendary NBA coach and player KC Jones, who celebrated his 74th birthday last Thursday.

What I found most interesting in the round of interviews conducted separately was the consensus among the four that the Filipinos basically have what it takes to make it to the NBA. Despite our height disadvan-

All of them agreed that there is a place for the small man in the NBA. For TJ Ford, who is considered Filipino-size at 5-foot-11, the intangi-

Wayne Hall, who has been T-Mac's personal trainer for 10 years, cites 6-2 Carlos Arroyo of the Utah Jazz as a perfect specimen of the NBA small man.

An NBA player has to be complete, he said. He has to be good in every aspect of the game, especially if he's defiment in height

Hall, who said his claim to fame is the development of T-Mac, was in the Philippines with the NBA superstar six years ago when he was not yet a super-

According to him, what hinders our development is the lack of facilities, Our drills, even those being used here in Beijing and other countries in Asia, are also way behind, compared to the United States.

From a field of 64 players, most of them giants, our very own duo of Kevin and Vince have caught the attention of veteran coach KC Jones, who admits he has "developed an eye for talent."

"Give these boys three to five years and they'll be a force to contend with," KC said.

Kevin and Vince played two-ontwo with the two NBA cagers, the duo of Kevin and Dwight Howard versus Vince and TJ Ford.

SINGAPORE-DOTTIE ARDINA STRUGgled with a six-over-par 78 hts still coested to an 11-stroke victory in girls' 11-12 years division at the close of the Asia-Pacific golf championships at the Singapore Island Country Club course here.

Starting the day with a six-stroke lead, the 12-year-old Ardina steadily pulled away in the final round as her rivals from Thailand and Hong Kong got stymied by the very tough conditions of the SICC island course.

Ardina wound up with a 226 aggregate, leaving behind Moria Jutanugam of Thailand, who ballooned to an 83 for 237, and Sharon Lee of Hong Kong, who scored an 80 for 238

Ardina thus added an Asian trophy to her vast collection of victories that include a Jumor World crown in 2002 and four straight diadems in the US Kids world championships.

Gerry Handog, the head of the Philippine delegation to this event, said Ardina was just a class above the rest.

From the start, we felt that Donie will be very hard to beat. Her game has matured a lot ever since she became a world champion and this win will boost her confidence in the coming months of competitions in the United States," Handog

In Manila, Jungolf Foundation of the Philippines chair Amalia Montecillo and president Bang Mamaril also praised Artina for again giving honor to the country.

SCORING EASILY ON POWER-PACKED SPIKES. Japan pummeled the Philippines, 25-16, 25-15, 25-16, in the 2006 Asian Women's school and coatege students from Hisamitsu Seyaku, amassed 49 kills, while the Philippines could only muster 22.

"For this game, I told them we should not lose points, no misses," said Japanese coach Masayoshi Manabe through an interpreter. "We also played better in defense and we have the height advantage."

Milhoko Tsutsui delivered a match-best 12 kills and one ace to lead Japan to its first victory after bowing to Kazakhstan in the opener.

Bannered by Team Accel, the Philippines absorbed its second straight loss for a 1-2 record.

"When it comes to skills, we can do what they're doing," said Philippine mentor Constante Reyes. "But they were more consistent and had better physical conditioning."

Earlier, Thailand also crussed to a straight-set victory over Indonesia 25-11, 25-18, 25-21, behind Witavan Apınyapong's 10 kills.

Thailand joined Japan and Kazakhstan at 1-1, while Indonesia remained winless in three matches.

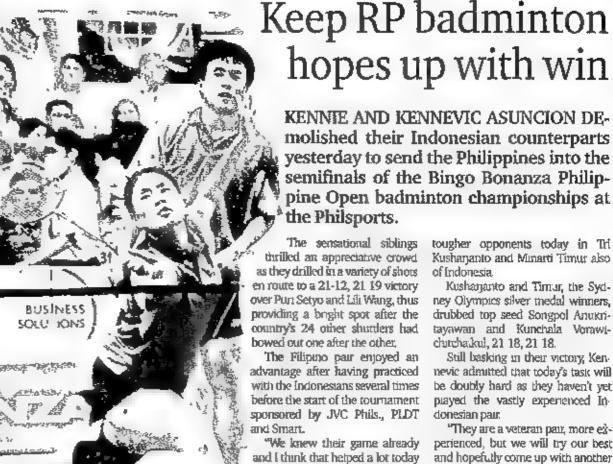

After getting pounded on the first two sets, seasoned spiker Cherry Rose Macatangay kept the Philippines within striking distance, 6-5, early in the third set

Japan quickly responded, hammering down consecutive kills to take an 18-11 lead.

Macatangay had eight kills to pace the Philippine team.

In the rightcap, defending champion China downed Chinese Tainer. 25-19, 25-21, 25-16, top grab the solo lead at 3-0.

Pistons avert collapse

Cool off Heat rally to square Eastern finals

AUBURN HILLS-THE DETroit Pistons held off a furious late rally to edge the Miami Heat 92-88 in Game Two of the Eastern Conference finals on Thursday, tying up the best-ofseven series at 1-1.

After slumping to a surprise home loss in the series opener, the Pistons attacked early, finding center Ben Wallace cutting to the basket and building an 18-point lead by the third quarter.

But the Heat, led by guard Dwayne Wade, rallied with a blistering 17 point run in the final 90 seconds to cut the lead to just two points, stunrung a sell-out Detroit crowd into stience.

Detroit guard Chauncey Billups struggled ear ly but hit two crucial free throws in the final seconds before reserve guard Lindsey Hunter sealed the win with a steal from Wade at the three-point

Tayshaun Prince carried the burden for Detroit with 10 fourth-quarter points while the rest of the Pistons offense sputtered.

Prince, who ended with a team-high 24 points, was called for a potentially devastating clock violation when he could not find an open player on an inbounds pass with less than 20 sec-

Prince said afterwards he had been trying to call timeout but was ignored by the referee.

"I was pretty upset about it, but things happen," Prince told reporters. "I just move on."

The broken play gave Miami the ball and set the stage for a running three-point shot by Wade that took the score to 90-88 and scemed to put a stunning comeback victory within reach.

Pistons coach Flip Saunders said his team was in danger of coasting its way to an upset loss as the clock ticked down.

"What happens so many times, you get near to the end of the game and you start playing not to lose instead of playing to win," he told refor the game to end."

Wade said the Heat would need the intensity they found in the final numutes of play to take Game Three.

"We've got to have that same want throughout the game," he said. "You can't do it against a Decroit team-dig yourself into a hole because this team will not beat themselves.

Miami center Shaquille O'Neal, who had 21 pourts, 12 rebounds and four blocked shots, also said the Heat came out too slow.

"We know that they're the best team in the East and we knew they were going to regroup and play," he said.

"We started to pack it up in the end and still had a couple chances to win, but we had too many turnovers and we were not playing smarter."

Pistons center Wallace, the heart of the Detroit defense, emerged as a surprise scoring option in the early going, with seven first-quarter points and nine for the game.

Casillas guards Spain's dreams

MADRID-RAUL WAS ONCE INvariably the first name on Spain's team sheet but now his Rea. Madrid teammate Iker Casillas is the country's most influential player.

The goalkeeper has already had seven seasons in Real's first team and is preparing for his fourth major international tournament, even though he has only just turned 25.

He is practically the only top player at Real to have escaped criticism over the past three seasons and has, almost single-handedly, held the nme-times European champions together when they have threatened to collapse.

A product of the club's youth setup, Casillas burst into the Real first team in 1999 aged 18 after an injury to Bodo Illgner.

He was then given a fast track promotion to the national side, earning a call up for Euro 2000, although he did not win his first cap until a friendly with Sweden the next season.

Casillas was the hero of Real's European Cup win in 2002 when he came off the bench to produce three exceptional saves to preserve his side's 2-1 advantage over Bayer Leverkusen.

A few days later a freak accident to Valencia keeper Santiago

CASILLAS: Quick reflexes

Canizares, who dropped an aftershave bottle on his foot, made Casillas Spain's first choice at the 2002 World Cup

He kept the team alive in a penalty shoot-out win over freland but was unable to perform similar heroics against South Korea in the quarterfinals.

Casillas left the tournament as Spain's No. 1 keeper.

A genuine world-class player, he has a gift for spectacular reflex saves and a reputation for being almost impossible to beat in oneon-one's mations.

Despite occasional lapses dealing with high balls, he remains Spain's most consistent performer and is the player most likely to make a difference of they progress beyond the group phase 'ISN'T IT ROMANTIC?'

Sharon is fabulous at 40

By Rito P. Asilo

NE NIGHT, DURING A LONG drive home from work, Sharon Cuneta's guitar-driven cover of Rupert Holmes' "Terminal" is playing on the car stereo, and we finally understand and empathize with the sentiment behind the sad love song

Aided by Jonathan Ong's deceptively upbeat arrangement, Holmes' overused ditty-one of 16 songs featured in the Megastar's sleek new collection, "Isn't It Romantic?"-reeks with painful irony.

Romance

Suddenly, this "Terminal" is no longer the trite and soppy standard it's always been to us. And our heart goes out to the lone,y career woman who is wistfully singing about finding romance at a bus terminal, and passing up on a love that might have been her escape from an empty, arid life.

Such is the power of Cuneta's storytelling gift. As a performer, Sharon's emotive ability is nonpareil, and her sincerity is beyond question. Whatever shortcoming she has in terms of range is conveniently masked by her unique ability to turn mush into musical magic.

Yes, the crystal-clear singing she so deftly demonstrated in her albums in the '80s like "Sixteen," "For Broken Hearts Only" and "Sharon and Love" may have slightly waned in recent years. But, as Sharon marks her 40th year, her sense of contentment, contemplative introspection and unconcealed joie de vivre have never been so nonceable. What better album to celebrate that milestone than "Isn't It Romantic?," which showcases the Megastar at her most vocally confident?

She only hits a snag when she pushes beyond her vocal capacity: In Stevie Wonder's "Until You Come Back to Me," for instance, the strain shows when she segues into jazzedap vocal improvisations.

In hard-to-sing tunes like "Time Will Reveal" or "Turn This World Into a Land of Magic" (remade recently by Regine Velasquez as "Buhay ng Buhay Ko"), Cuneta has proven that she's no stranger to songs with various degrees of difficulty, and those that demand a

In recent years, however, Sharon has acquired a deeper voice that fits certain song types more than others. That, in itself, is not such a bad thing. In the year's most beautifully-packaged local album, she breathes life and meaning into old favorites.

Through Sharon's interpretive skill, Eric Carmen's "Isn't It Romantic"," Teri de Sario's "Sometimes a Love Goes Wrong," Randell's "It Takes a Man and a Woman," and the Bee Gees' "How Deep is Your Love?" are successfully rehashed into seemingly brand-new love songs.

If you miss listening to the Megastar's less popular but otherwise excellent jazz-finged small gems like "it's Not You," "Lambing Ko Lang," "Make It Happen," "Both Sides Now," "Parang Baliw" or "Hanggang Saan, Hanggang Kallan?," shelling your hard-earned bucks for this slickly-produced album won't be for naught.

Lineup

Also included in the robust lineup are covers of "Simply Jesse," "Laughter in the Rain," "I Have to Say I Love You in a Song," "Heaven Knows," "Like A Lover," "Birthday Song,"
"With A Little Help from My Friends," a new version of Herb Alpert and Lan. Hall's "I Don't Want You to Go," and James Taylor's "If I Keep My Heart Out of S ght," which she dedicates to her husband, Sen. Francis Pangibnan

Sharon, however, saves the best for last: For the collection's final cut, she lovingly revisits one of the best songs of her sterling recording career-Odette Quesada's "To Love the touching naiveté, honesty and lyrical quality of "battle-scarred," but her triumph the original version, but she manages to pull it off by delivering a more somber, less innocent rendering.

In the CD's extensive liner notes, Cuneta wears her heart on her sleeve. She shares: "I truly felt so different singing 'To Love Again' at 40 from when I first recorded it at 17... I cried so hard before I could record it again. I guess I've been missing my youth so much. I had no idea I was going to be so battlescarred at age 40!"

Twenty eight years after recording her first single, "Tawag ng Pag-ibig," Sharon may indeed be over many odds continues to inspire people.

Profusely grateful

Sharon is profusely grateful for the blessurgs, and remains good-natured about everything-from a past failed marriage to her constant battle with the bulge. In the album, she thanks a friend (Peachy Mariano) "for reminding me I was once 'Darna' and will always be inside!"

HANKS, Insufficient personal investment.

The mouse that roared, the lion that squeaked

By Nestor U. Torre

SOME BOOKS MAKE GOOD movies, but others have a hard time transforming themselves into memorable films. Case in point: "The Da Vinci Code "It's tronic that, after all of the controversy and religious unction that presaged its opening date, Ron Howard's film version of Dan Brown's best-selling book is still bogged down un-words.

Age and mystery

work hard to come up with alternately beautiful and brooding images that give the production its appropriate patina of age and mystery.

However, these striking images eventually take the back seat to the film script's efforted attempt to make verbal sense of an of the new takes on the genuine wellsprings of Christianity that Brown and his school of thought represent

The worst victim in the movie's cast in this regard is Audrey Tautou, the putative granddaughter of the man murdered at the move's Not that director Howard doesn't start-and the long lost link to the speculative union between Jesus Christ and Mary Magdalene.

Despite her character's importance, Tautou is often reduced to aslong a stultifying series of questions to be answered by other characters played by the film's other lead actors, about all of the "Gnostic" reinter pretations of early Church history.

Documentary

As such, she comes off more like an interviewer in a documentary than an actress in a religious dramatic-thir ler. What a waste of ta cnt.

At the same time, we must note that, for al. of her charm, Tautou is too laidback and even bland to make an insp.ring presence when it's eventually revealed that she's the direct descendant of the Marovig nian Jesus-Magda lene genetic ...ne.

Tom Hanks also fails to pass muster as the film's lead actor. because his character, for all of his expertise, has little personal investment in the film's ongoing investigation and convo uted drama.

Compelling

The actor who turns in the most competting performance a lan McK e len as another expert who has much more at stake in the turged plot's denoticment.

Paul Bettany as the plot's most visible vilam also comes on strong, but his performance is compromised by excessively obvious "evil" (perpetrated in the name of "good," it turns out)

It's also sadly predicrable that most of the "conniving" cier ics in the film are portrayed as "misguided" defenders of the faith who will stop at nothing, not even murder, to clamp down on the Jesus Magdalene "secret" that could "expose" Christian ty as a faith that's founded on a "he "

Subjective

This subjective coloring and straining of church history's "factual" matrix betray the production's cyn-.ca. motives, and lend credence to Christians' view that the book-and now the film—is an attack on some of the basic tenets of their faith, viewing After Howard's Iim version, however, we ean state that Christrans have little to fear in this regard, because the production fails to "prove" its alternative view of Jesus Christ and the Church He founded

Stating it does not make it so, particutarly in the world of film, where statements have to be dramatica, y

Flat characters bog down new 'Poseidon' remake

By Noelani Torre

SOME 30 YEARS AGO, there was this movie about a bunch of people trying to get out of a cruise ship that had seen turned upside down by a 150-foot rogue wave

Based on a book by Paul Ga.l.co, "The Poseidon Adventure" turned out to be one of the first in a long ane of what we now call disaster flicks, but it's certainly remained one of the most memorable.

Mystery

In fact, why anybody thought it needed to be remade at all is a mystery, but that's what they did. So now, we have our own 21st century, streamaned and CGI-enhanced version, "Poseidon."

Hollywood apparently has a thing for remakes, which is a bit odd since they often have iffy prospects, and it certainly doesn't help that "The Posetdon Adventure" is considered a classic. A campier sort of classic, to be sure, but a classic nonetheless-and one that had Gene Hackman all decked out in priestly vestments as the reluctant hero.

In director Wo fgang Petersen's "Poseidon," this role is given to Josh Lucas, who plays professional gambler Dylan Johns. No priestly vestments and Messian c tendencies there, and though they've tried to make him am-

Not that strong characterizations are the point of this movie. In fact, they're hardly important at all. The real stars of this let's-get-out-of-thissinking ship adventure are the action and special effects.

Clocking in at less than 100 minutes, "Poseidon" has got to be one of the shortest feature films Petersen has made.

Appetite for gore

By focusing on the action and cutting out the characters' back stories and the conflicts between characters, Petersen is counting on the productions' fast pace and the audience's appente for gore to keep us interested.

After all people who watch characters.

it's not just one disaster, either-rogue waves are only the first of the potentially fata: problems facing the intrepid passengers (including a for mer mayor of New York City, played by Kurt Russell) who decide to find their way out: There are also flash fires, electrocution, heavy objects falling and, of course, water, water everywhere. Petersen delivers on the action and the effects (though some of them look too much like CGls), but they're not quite high-octane enough to make up for the movie script's banal lines and flat

Dance in the streets sun protected

IT'S THE FIESTA MONTH OF MAY AND the weather is still warm and humid, but still we go out and join the festive atmosphere under the sun. It's good to know that all the suncare protection needed can be provided by Banana Boat, the number one suncare product in the United States, Banana Boat sun protection products have been recently launched in the Philippines in time for everyone's fiesta requirements. Banana Boat from Playtex offers a complete range of pre-sun, during and after sun products that comes in non-greasy, fragrance-free and contains aloe vera extract and vitamin E combined formulations Banana Boat is appropriate for all types of Asian skin because it provides tried and proven solutions for people seeking to protect themselves yet provide the appropriate skin tanning without the actual and harmful sun exposure.

Solar rays consist of invisible UV rays. There are three types of UV rays, name.y UVC (the shortest wavelength band and filtered out by the atmosphere and ozone layer); UVB (also known as the tanning ray and penetrates into the skin causing sunburns and skin cancer); and UVA (which passes effortlessly through the atmosphere with the longest wavelength band and equally damaging, causing skin aging and melanomas. Sunscreens or sumblocks provide the tested solution in preventing all these types of UV-induced skin diseases.

Banana Boat is distributed by Brands Worldwide and can be found in all leading department stores, drugstores and supermarkets nationwide.

Why Taylor Hicks is 2006's

By Nestor U. Torre

LAST THURSDAY, THE HUGELY POPULAR "American Idol" singing tilt finally announced this year's winner-Taylor Hicks. The prematurely grey-haired unknown got a clear majority of the record-setting 63.4 million votes cast in the grand finals, enabling him to trounce the also gifted and charismatic Katharine McPhee.

Instructive tale

Katharine is a great combination of talent and beauty, so why did more viewer-voters dote on Taylor, the Hick? Therein lies a popinstructive tale:

When Taylor first auditioned for "American Idol," judges Randy Jackson and Paula Abdul found him refreshingly original and feisty, but the chronically ornery Simon Cowell predicted that he wouldn't survive the next round.

But, wonder of wonders, Taylor did survive. More than that, he was soon attracting a lot of fans who liked his "soulful" approach to performance, and promptly billed themselves as his Soul Patrol.

In time, even the haughty Simon would apologize for his scathing disdain for Taylor, and even cited him as one of his top three beis to win the tilt.

NOW SNOWING

'X-Men' franchise in crackling finale

"X-Men: The Last Stand"

D: Brett Ratner

, S: Hugh Jackman, Halle Berry, Ian McKellen, Patrick Stewart, Famke Janssen

A RE YOU WILLING TO change who you are to find acceptance? In Brett Ratner's crackling, fast-paced adaptation of the X-Men's "Dark Phoenix" saga, when a "cure" for mutancy is discovered, mutants from all over the world are confronted with issues of identity, racial diversity, alienation and lust for power.

For the first time, Eric Lehnsherr ake Magneto (Ian McKellen) and Charles Xavier's (Patrick Stewart) genetically-gifted followers are given a choice: To retain the uniqueness that isolates and alienates them or give up their powers to fit into a world that fears and despises them.

Billionaire industrialist Warren Worthungton II (Michael Murphy), father of the 16-footwinged Angel (Ben Poster), spearheads the development of the "cure" for mutants like his son when he finds Jimmy oka Leech (Cameron Bright), the young source of the antidote. But, the drug can only be generated—and replicated-from the boy, whom Magneto sees as a threat to earth's mutant population.

Together with his group, the Brotherhood of Mutanta, Magneto recruits the confused Jean Grey (Famke Janssen), who is "resurrected" after sacrificing her life to save her teammates in "X-Men 2," to get rid of Jimmy. Now in full control of her telekinetic and telepathic powers, Jean emerges as the most powerful mutant there is even mightier than Professor X and Magneto combined!

But, does Jean allow her tremendous powers to control her? As the comic-book adage repeatedly cautions: With great power comes great responsibility-and sometimes, it's easy to get overwhelmed by it.

On surface, the moral conflict the film presents is a classic comic-book case, but the existential issues that this particular storyline treads aren't really so different from those that besiege the social and political landscape of the current world order. On point of action and entertainment, Brett Ratner delivers. Although not as cerebral nor as smooth as Bryan Singer (who left Marvel's hicrative movie franchise to do "Superman Returns," which had to recruit another director when Rather quit the project), Rather pulls no punches from the jaw-dropping special effects (see the Golden Gate bridge fly, etc.) to the countless eardrum-pounding explosions.

The movie's special effects aren't as pol-Ished, and some lines are hokey and clichéridden-as if the writers lifted lines from a

For her part, Katharine was also bowling HICKS. them over, but in a quieter and more gradual Originality way. To be sure, she occasionally came across and as nervous and insecure, but there was something "stellar" about her that started to excite worked in viewers, especially after astute packaging enhanced her beauty and appeal, complementing her exceptional singing voice.

In time, Taylor and Katharine emerged as a study in instructive contrasts: He was a downhome original, she was a star in the making; he was all heart and energy, she was the epitome of cool and sophistication.

Idiosyncratic

By rights, the new American Idol should be a star, so that would tip the tilt in favor of CARCATOREN AMERICOCOM

PHILIPPINE DAILY

American Idol

Katharine. But, idiosyncratic

Taylor excited viewers more, possibly because they could relate to him, and felt that he sang experience also Taylor's worked in his favor. At 29, he was the most sensor singer in the finals, and the youth-oriented recording industry may have considered him too old to make it as a recording and competent star. But, the show's viewers obviously disagreed, and with their nullions of votes, made him their star,

It was their way of reminding record and concert producers that "manufactured" and "preparitaged" stars are OK, but the talents who really excite the viewing and listening public are those who effect a personal connection with their audience, a "key connect" that makes factors like looks and age prelevant.

The huge number of votes cast in this year's grand finals indicates that Taylor and Katharine's respective armies of fans went allout to support them. The fact that Taylor won proves that more people voted from the heart, from America's Heartland. And that's uniquely right, because Taylor Hicks is-all heart!

Aside from "Magnifico," the selection in-cluded Laurice Guillen's "Tanging Yaman," Aureaus Solito's "Ang Pagdadalaga ni Maximo Onveros," Mark Meny's "Crying Ladies," Jeffrey Jeturian's "Minsan Pa" and Olivia Lamasan's "Milan "

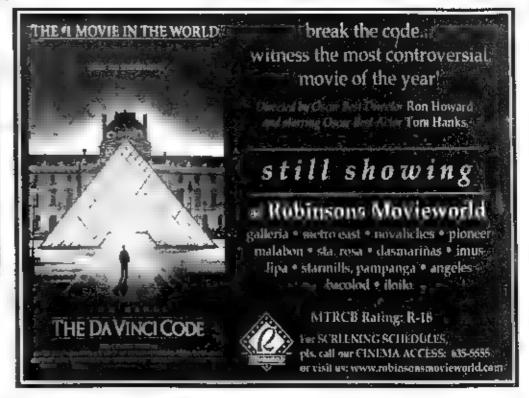

On opening night, the festival drew a sizable crowd. Naturally, we felt proud that the movie was appreciated for its message, acting and direction. The theme of good winning over evil touched viewers

The success of "Magnifico" and other recent "little" films hints at the future of Philippine cinema. These independent films concentrate on theme and story rather than starappeal and bonggo elements.

"SLITHER." Cheesy, campy—but fun.

Homage to slime and gore flicks

By Noelani Torre

WHO SAYS HORROR FLICKS CAN'T BE fun? Certainly not first-time director James Gunn, whose directorial debut claims to be both a horror movie and a comedy.

If you're familiar with films like "The Thing," "Invasion of the Body Snatchers," "Night of the Living Dead," and practically anything by George Romero, John Carpenter, and David Cronenberg, you'll probably recognize a lot of the elements present in "Slither."

There's the slimy alien life form that arrives on a quiet Southern town via meteorite. The absolutely gross way that the life form goes about invading human bodies, and reproducing in them. Lurching zombies, a ditzy bionde, and a bathroom scene with a cute teen.

Tongue-in-cheek

If the attens-invade-a-sleepy-redneck-town story and all of the abovementioned sound like they're from every B-horror movie you've ever seen, that's because they are. This is where the comedy is, in the conscious and very tongue-incheek use of these gross-out elements.

"Slither," in fact, looks like the work of a man who obviously has a great love for this kind of fare. Gunn, who wrote the script for the highly praised 2004 remake of "Dawn of the Dead," is a self-confessed horror geek, and this movie is his homage to the slime and gore films that not all of us might love, but which we all certainly know.

If you're a fan of the genre, you'll enjoy the fact that the film is peppered with allusions to earlier flicks. Non-fans may not get all the injokes, but will still enjoy the zany mix of creeps and laughs. But if you don't enjoy seeing a lot of blood and guts, you may want to skip this since "Stither" is an unabashed grossfest.

Small town

The film is set in the small town of Wheelsy, a slow place populated mostly by hicks where things are so boring that the cops spend the ritime monitoring the speed of passing whip-poorwills.

Then, down comes the alien-carrying meteorite, a stug-like alien invades local millionaire Grant Grant (Michael Rooker of "Henry Portrait of a Senal Killer" fame), pets and cattle start getting mutilated, and the local beauty and Grant's wife Starla (a ditzy Elizabeth Banks) notices that her busband's rash is turning out to be more than just an aliergic reaction.

Police chief

She is rescued from her transformed busband (who is turning into some sort of squid) by police chief Bill Pardy (a wonderfully deadpan Nathan Fillion), and pretty soon the only uninfected people left in town are the cute teen (Tama Saulnier) and the foul-mouthed mayor (Gregg Henry)

It's cheesy, campy and generally dumb, but it's also smartly handled, with actors who turn in serious performances (bet they had a lot of fun), and pacing that's only a few gasps away from being completely breathless

I never knew how difficult this job was until I tried it myself. Mixing cement and gravel was easy at first—but try doing it for more than five minutes and your back will hurt!

Our third visit to the construction site was for the bricktaying stage. Julius joined our group and he enjoyed the experience so much—lifting hollow blocks and laying them with precision.

Our fourth visit to the site was a fun one—we painted the two-story house with the family's choice of color—light lavender. The activity became even more special because the GK choir serenaded us.

Then, it was time for the ceremonia, turnover—an emotional moment for all of us. The Cortes family gave a very simple, moving message of thanks, and we thanked them in turn. He.ping build their house was an exper-ence that nourished our souls.

The Bayanihan spirit is alive in the very concept and vision of building a GK house. Many Manuel is a GK hero himself—the volunteers to build his neighbors' houses. Now, with God's grace, he and his whose family have a house.

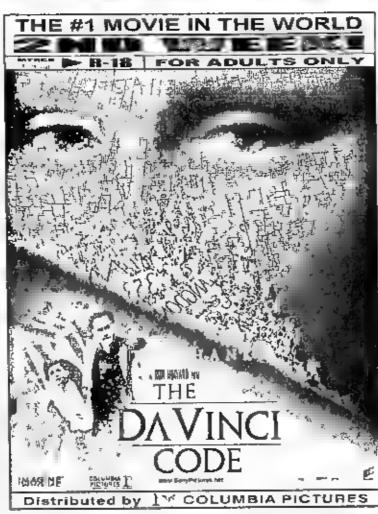

They can proudly call their own.

I went back to visit the Cortes family last January when I accompanied my good friend, Dr Vicki Belo, her daughter Cristalie, and the Belo staff to Sitio Ruby. They, too, donated houses beside the home of Mang Manue. It was Dr. Vicki's gift to others on her birthday. Cristalie also did the same on her natal day last April.

Last week, Junus and I were again at Sitio Ruby, to Judge a summer art contest empowering the youth and making them discover their true potentials. You see, GK is not just about building a house, it also means building hyes—and character.

Thank you, 'ferrence and Thelma Grana, Coupies for Christ cluster head for GK Sitio Ruby, Gerry Santos, project director of GK Sitio Ruby, and lus wife Chona, Ferddie Mendoza, SAGIP project manager of Sitio Ruby, and all the good people of Sitio Ruby, You have enriched our lives, and contributed to our spiritual growth!

By Tintin Bersola Babao

HAVE YOU EVER EXPERIENCED moving in and out of homes too frequently and having no real permanent address? As a young girl, I did.

My earliest memory of eviction was when I was four years old. It was a small apartment in Cubao We had no choice but to move out because my father had a falling out with his siblings.

The next years, my parents, only sister and I lived a nomadic life—living in apartments in Cubao, Matatag St., Parañaque, Fairview, White Plains, Greenhills, Loyola Heights, etc. We must have lived in more than 25 apartments and houses in my afetime!

Reasons

There were varied reasons. Most of the time, we were living in dire straits. When my parents sold everything from country club shares to chicharon to earn a living, we lived in cramped apartments. When they chanced upon a gold mine seding oriental furniture, we moved to a 1,000-sqm. corner house with a swimming pool in Greenhils.

Then, the business went bankrupt. We sold the house and moved to a smaller home. That was in 1987—I was 17 years old. For the next seven years, the cycle of

So, when I started earning my own money between 1993-1996. ,I took a leap of faith, and atquired a loan for a house which I proudly called mme-bought with my blood, sweat and tears.

I only moved out of that home when I married and moved to my conjugal home with Julius. My mem and brother still live in that house today. It is my gift to them

It is because of my past that I donated and helped build a house

The day I met the Cortes family

Manuel, told me that they would sleep in a sitting position to fit in the old bunk bed.

Interiors

The interiors would get flooded. And when the water level rose, all of them would just clamb onto the bed and stayed there till the water subsided. Almost directly underneath their charcoal "Jutuan" was, to my horror, their toilet bowl. Simply put, this wasn't the kind of home the Cortes family deserved

That Saturday was an emotional day for them-they were going to say goodbye to the house that was witness to their lives' many ups and downs. Yet, they were all thankful: Finally, they would have a decent place to live in. They would no longer be considered squatters. We all joined hands and closed our eves in prayer Minutes later, the "demolition team" composed of GK volunteers puruneled away until the house was reduced to rubble.

My friends and I devoted four weekends to participate in the building process. We were there during the "politada" stage-

IT WAS IN 1950 WHEN NATY Crame Rogers began her career as educator and stage artist at Arena Theater. She assisted Dr. Severino Montano in founding the first community theater. And she was responsible for establishing the Drama Education and Theater Arts program of the Philippine Normal University.

Dynamic force

"Drama can be a dynamic force in the community. By presenting classics, we enrich education and instill love for country and a sense of pride in our cultural heritage, and derive inspiration from great literature," she explains.

in 1984, Naty formed the Philippine Drama Company and began presenting plays in her living room. She staged plays in the home of Engineer and Mrs. Jose Mabanta, in the gardens of Ayala Alabang, in the basketball court of Baguio University, and in the sprawling Kapitolyo Gardens now known as the Aming Tahanan Sala Theater

ePLDT to buy 100% of SPI Tech

By Daxim L. Lucas

PHILIPPINE LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE Co. (PLDT) added another company to its growing service portfolio by acquiring one of the biggest business process outsourcing firm in the world

In a statement, the country's largest telecommunications firm said it had authorized its information and communications technology arm, ePLDT inc., to acquire 100 percent of the SPI group of companies.

SPI is the second largest "pure-play" business process outsourcing (BPO) company and the ninth biggest independent BPO service provider in the world

"On May 24, SPI Tech L.P., the parent company of SPI, formally accepted the letter of interest submitted by ePLDT for the acquisition of 100 percent of SPI," the company said

No price has yet been set for the transaction. PLDT said it would use internally generated cash to fund ePLDT's acquisition of SPI

"The seller has granted an exclusivity period within which to conduct due diligence on SPI and complete the transaction," PLDT said

ePLDT has engaged investment banking firm Credit Suisse as its independent financial adviser for the transaction.

The acquisition of SPI, together with its ex-Isting Ventus ca.l center group, will help solidify ePLDT's position as one of the major fullservice BPO companies in the industry, the company said.

"[It will] enable ePLDT to benefit greatly from the forecast growth in the BPO secror," the company added,

RP gets Japan grant for microfinance sector

By Michelle V. Remo

THE JAPANESE GOVERNMENT has agreed to provide the Philippines $900,000 worth of grant to help develop the country's microfinance industry and make it more useful for households and small businesses.

The grant, approved by the Japan Fund for Poverty Reduction (JFPR), will be administered by the Asian Development Bank (ADB).

It will be used to develop the capabilities of cooperatives engaged in credit and savings oper ations and make them comply better with regulatory rules. It will also help enhance the capabulity of the Cooperative Development Authority (CDA) in monitoring the operations of cooperatives nationwide.

"Improved access to efficient microfinance services can help the poor smooth their consumption, manage their risk better and build assets," Euch Sasaki. ADB finacial secror specialist, said during the signing of the grant held at the Department of Finance last Thursday.

"The challenge is how to provide access to sustainable microfinance services for the more than 3 million, households in the Philippunes that currently do not have access," the Sasakı sa d the grant would complement the $150 million worth of official development assistance recently approved by the ADB for the Philippines. The $150 million will fund the Microfinance Development Program, which also focused on building viable microfinance institutions and strengthening regulatory capacity of the CDA.

The National Credit Council, an interagency body headed by the Department of Finance, was tasked to be the implementing agency for the microfinance development projects.

The grant for the Philippines from Japan came despite earlier talks that the Japanese government was considering to suspend the provision of assistance to the Philippines following the failure of the Philippine government to promptly give tax refund claims of Japanese contractors for infrastructure projects.

DOF officials had said that the issue was being addressed as some tax refund claims had arready been serviced

The grant for the development of the microfinance industry followed the Arroyo administra tion's pronouncements that it would give focus on boosting small, and med um-sized enterprises as a strategy to boost economic growth.

BSP seen raising rates

By Doris C. Dumlao

THE BANGKO SENTRAL NG PILIPINAS IS seen under pressure to raise interest rates, most akely by haif a percentage point (50 basis points) in the second semester, to make pesodenominated assets more attractive given a globa, seildown on emerging market portfolio.

During the opening of the ACI World Congress hosted by Phaippine foreign exchange traders, financial market experts predicted that the BSP would have to tighten monetary policy soon to nudge up peso-denominated government bond yields given the negative differentrals and the fact that rates had fallen too low versus offshore benchmarks.

The peso has given up most gains against the dollar this year and moved closer to the 53 $1 barrier alongside a regional weakness inggered by prospects of higher U5 interest rates.

In a session on post-Greenspan interest rate regume in the United States; experts expressed moted views-on-whether the US Federa, Reserve's series of monetary lightening was over. But as far as Asia was concerned, the Phuippines is seen among those under pressure to bring up local bond yields to prevent capital outflows. Michael Spencer, Deutsche Bank chief economist for Asia and head of global market research, said the relatively low interest rates suggested that "capital flows would be very high " Spencer predicted that the BSP would have to raise its overnight rates by 50 basis points in the second half. "I m looking at two 25 bas:s-point hikes in the third and fourth quarter and maybe stretching it to the beginning of next year," Spencer stressed.

"I do think part of their concern is the resa tively low level of interest races which is negative in real terms if you look back to it over time and very low relative to US dollar yields," he said.

Andrew Freris, chief economist and head of fixed income research at BNP Paribas, said Thatiand, Malaysia and India had continued to raise interest rates and would likely be the first to ease by the fourth quarter.

He said the Philippines and Taiwan would be among those under pressure to likewise raise interest rates later this year. He said there was a 50-percent probability that there would be an interest rate increase during the

BSP's policy rate-setting next week. Most fore gn exchange traders present during the ACI World Congress agreed with the two foreign experts assessment ACI World Congress organizing chair Jose Arnuifo Veloso, treasurer at HSBC Philippines, said "If currency speculation persists due to emerging market sell-off then the BSP may be tempted to arrest the peso dectine. If only due to inflation cost-push I don't concur." "If the BSP will hike rates, I view the maximum will be 50 basis points for the year unless the fed moves over 5.5 percent call rate," Veloso explained.

The market staged a technical recovery in line with the rise in global markets" said Lawrence de Leon of Accord Capital Equities.

"However, I think we will continue to see volatility in the near term largely because of external developments, particularly concerns about rising interest rates in the US and volatile commodity prices," he said Heavyweight Phaippine Long Distance Telephone Co. (PLDT) .ed the rally, rising P60 to P2,010.

Ayala Land Inc. advanced 75 centavos to P12.75 and its parent, Ayala Corp., rose P7-50 to P407.50 Ayala Corp uni. Bank of the Philippine Islands was up P3 at P63 SO.

Invisibility cloak > soon a reality?

ASHINGTON— Imagine an invisibility cloak that works just like the one Harry Potter inherited from his father.

Researchers in England and the United States think they know how to do that. They are laying our the blueprint and calling for help in developing the exotic materials needed to build a cloak.

The keys are special manmade materials, unlike any in nature or the Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry. These materials are intended to steer light and other forms of electromagnetic radiation around an object, rendering it as invisible as something tucked into a hole in space. "Is it science fiction? Well, it's theory and that already is not science fiction. It's theoretically possible to do all these Harry Potter things, but what's standing in the way is our engineering capabilities," said John Pendry, a physicist at the Imperial College London.

Details of the study, which Pendry co-wrote, appear in Thursday's online edition of the journal Science.

Scientists not involved in the work said it presents a solid case for making invisibility an attain-

Metamaterials

"This is very interesting science and a very interesting idea and it is supported on a great mathematical and physical basis," said Nader Engheta, a professor of electrical and systems engineering at the University of Pennsylvania. Enghera has done his own work on invisibility using novel materials called metamateria.s.

Pendry and his co-authors also propose using metamaterials because they can be tuned to bend electromagnetic radiation-radio waves and visible light, for exampie in any direction.

A doak made of those materials, with a structure designed down to the submicroscopic scale, would neither reflect light nor cast a shadow.

Instead, like a river streaming around a smooth boulder, light and all other forms of electromagnetic radiation would strike the cloak and simply flow around it, continuing on as if it never bumped up against an obstacle. That would give an onlooker the apparent aixility to peer right through the cloak, with everything tucked inside concealed from view.

18 months away

Yes, you could actually make someone invisible as long as someone wears a cloak made of this material," said Patanjali Parimi, a Northeastern University physicist and design engineer at Chelton Microwave Corp. in Bolton, Massachusetts.

Such a cloak does not exist, but early versions that could mask microwaves and other forms of electromagnetic radiation could be as close as 18 months away, Pendry said. He said the study was "an invitation to come and play with these new ideas."

"We will have a cloak after not too long," he said.

The Pentagon's Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency supported the research, given the obvious military applications of such stealthy technology.

While Harry Potter could wear his cloak to skulk around Hogwarts, a real-world version probably would not be something just to be thrown on, Pendry said.

"To be realistic, it's going to be fairly thick. Cloak is a misnomer. 'Shield' might be more appropriare," he said.

2 drugs can help prevent breast cancer

By Charles E. Buban

RALOXIPENE IS AS EFFECTIVE as tamoxifen in reducing the risk of breast cancer in postmenopausal women at increased risk for the disease. This is the result of the nearly completed fiveyear Study of Tamoxifen and Raloxifene (STAR), the largest North American breast cancer prevention trial undertaken.

Since 1998, tamoxifen has been the only drug available to reduce breast cancer risk. However, tamoxifen also triggers menopausal symptoms like hot flashes and slightly increases the chances of a woman developing uterme cancers, blood clots, strokes and cataracts.

On the other hand, raloxifene (developed by Eli Lilly under the brand name Evista) was approved in 1997 for the prevention osteoporosis in postmenopausal women. Researchers took a second look at raloxifene after studies showed that fewer women who took the drug developed breast cancer compared to those taking a placebo.

Fewer side effects

The STAR trial showed that both drugs reduced the risk of developing invasive breast cancer by about 50 percent, but women who took raloxifene daily had 36 percent fewer utenne cancers and 29 percent fewer blood clots than the women who took tamoxifen.

Also, initial results from the STAR suggest that reloxifene does not increase the risk of developing a cataract, as tamoxifen does.

The final results of the trial, involving 19,747 women in more than 500 centers across the United States, Canada and Puerto Rico, will be known later this year.

Significant step

Dr. Liha Luna, a senior consultant at the FEU-Dr. Nicanor Reyes Medical Foundation Medical Center's Department of Obstetries and Gynecology, said the positive news from the STAR trial is a significant step in the country's fight against breast cancer.

She pointed out that the Philippines has one of the highest incidence of breast cancer in all of Asia.

Postmenopausa. Filipino women, she said, would now have a choice of two breast cancer risk reduction drugs.

Raloxifene and tamoxifen belong to a class of drugs known as selective estrogen receptor modulators, or SERMS. Luna said these drugs achieve the positive effects of traditional estrogen therapy, including stabilizing bone mass and improving lipid profile, and avoid the neganve effects like increased risk of uterine cancer and breast cancer.

Car of the future

WITH RISING GAS PRICES AND environmental destruction, there is an imperative need for car companies to come up with creative solutions. Toyota has its electric hybrid Prius, and now Daimler-Chrysler has fuel cells. The latter technology is almost too good to be true: imagine driving a Mercedes Benz, no less, and emitting not noxious gas, but water!

How is this possible? According to the auto manufacturer, the cedes-Benz A-class. This is the power unit of this car of the future operates on hydrogen, either in pure form or bound in a compound. This hydrogen, together with oxygen, is converted into electricity, which can then be used to power the motor. Voilat The only substance produced in this entire process is water, or more accurately, water vapor. What's more, the fue, cell drive is doubly more efficient than conventional petrol engine.

20 prototypes

Last April at The Loft at Rockwell Center, CATS Motors and Daimler-Chrysler held a symposium on innovative technologies. They have the right to be proud. Since the 1990s, DamlerChrysler has been researching on fuel cell technology, and around 20 prototypes have already come into being.

In 2001, the minivan Natrium (from the German and Latin word for sodium) displayed an innovative way to store hydrogen-not from gas tanks but generated directly from sodium borohydride, a white salt. A year later, the NECAR 5, a fuel cell running on methanol, set a long-distance record by crossing the USA from San Francisco to Washing ton. In 2004, at the Geneva International Motor Show, the Jeep Treo concept demonstrated how the fuel cell can power a vehicle with two electric motors and four-wheel drive.

Reliable fuel supply

Fuel cells are rapidly being adapted around the world. Since 2003, 60 cars have been subjected to tests in everyday operation with selected customers in the USA, Europe, Japan and Singapore, in 10 European cities and later this year in Australia, more than 30 fuel cell buses are already in operation plying their usual routes. In Hamburg, the company Hermes-Versand has already been using a fuel cell Sprinter vehicle since 2001 to deliver packages, UPS did the same in 2004.

The catch? A reliable fuel supply infrastructure must be built, and more innovations be done to make the cars affordable to the public.

Leyte is now an integral part of the DaimlerChrysler operation. and the company Rieter.

Since 2004, abaca fibers have been used in the outer cover of the spare-wheel compartment on the three-door version of the Merfirst ever application of a natural fiber in a car's exterior.

Abaca fibers are excellent, with strength, durability and other properties similar to those of glass fibers. What's more, abaca fiber production is less energy intensive, achieving up to 60 percent energy savings, which significantly reduce the emission of carbon dioxide and other posonous gases.

Reforestation

At the Abaca Processing Center at Leyte State University, various projects are underway, such as selecting suitable plants, improving cultivation, processing fiber, reforesting the rain forest, training farmers, and developing the best mux for cars.

Best of all, our forests regenerate. According to Daumler-Chrysler, "For about 50 years now, there has been very little rain forest left in the Philippines. It was cleared primarily to take TT'S LATE AFTERNOON, YOU WALK INTO space for coconut plantations. The goal of the abaca project is to replace this monoculture with domestic plants and trees. The partners in the project instruct farmers in rainforestation farming. There is no more exclusive planting of coconuts, but mixed cultivation with abaca, bananas, manuoc and durian trees."

Stops soll erosion

The natural reforestation of the rain forest stops the soil erosion caused by clear cutting and large-area felling. It stabilizes the slopes that can be carried away by landslides. And ulumately, there is a chance of maintaining the enormous variety of species, which is actually higher in the Philippines than in the Amazon rain forest

"At the same time, abaca processing creates jobs for the local farmers, multiplying their income tenfold and improving their hving conditions."

Other partners in the project include the German Investment and Development Association, Hohenheim University, Reutlingen Polytechnic College, the National Abaca Research Center, the European Nature Heritage Pund

Early morning BP surge risky By Rafael R. Castillo, MD

CONTRARY TO WHAT MOST people think, blood pressure generally increases in the early morning, hours just before one wakes up and is sustained until mid-morning. It then gradually decreases during the day and even dips at night when one is sleeping, before it surges during the early morning hours. This is called the normal diurnal pattern of the BP

The early morning matter how restful one's sleep is, has been identified as the culprit behand the encreased incidence of strokes and heart attacks, even sudden death, in the early morning

Recently published studies in elderly patients suggest that hypertension in the morning hours is a strong, independent predictor of future stroke events, and this has been shown as a greater risk than having sustained hypertension during the daytime.

A marning surge in blood pressure has also been identified as a better predictor of stroke than extreme dips in the BP at night.

Extreme dipping of the BP

Doctors usually ask hypertensive patients to check their BP upon waking up just before they take their next dose of their BP-lowering pills. This gives the physician an idea

Normal pattern

The normal diurnal BP pattern even in healthy nonhypertensive individuals reflects the falling of the BP during the night and rising during the early morning hours prior to awakening. Abnormal diurnal patterns include the sustained level of the BP at night ("nondippers") Nondippers usually have more damage to the vital organs, including the brain, heart, and kidneys. The risk is even higher those without the early morning when the BP during sleep is acrically higher than during the waking hours, and this group has been called "risers."

Dr. Kazuomi Kario of the Jich: Medical School in Tochigi, Japan, and his colleagues have identified another subtype of abnormal diurnal variation. These are the so-called extreme dippers, who have a higher freof both quency "silent" (no symptoms) and clinical brain disease which

Extreme dippers may also have an exaggerated morning surge of the BP. They have shown that risers have the worst stroke prognosis, and extreme dippers are at an intermediate

In the study, researchers found that 78 percent of the stroke events occurred between 6 a.m. and noon in those with a significant early morning BP surge, compared with 41 percent in surge—a climically significant dif-

"An excessive morning surge was an independent predictor of stroke in elderly patients with hy-pertension," Dr. Kario concluded. He added that although in their previous work, they showed that extreme dippers are at an increased risk of stroke, the culprit mechanism may actually be the morning surge, rather than excessive low blood pressure during the night.

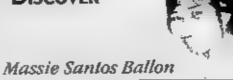

Dr. Kario speculated that the early morning BP surge may trigger platelet stickness or hyperaggregation leading to the formation of blood clots inside the

nated approximately half a liter of blood rich with the desired antibodies. The researchers separated the antibodies and tested them for stability at various temperatures. Some of the caffeme-specific antibodies, specifically those from Very Señorita, were found to be able to withstand temperatures close to 90 degrees Celsius.

When these selected antibodies were used in a crude version of the dipstick assay and tested against more established and less portable caffeine assays, Ladenson et al. found that their antibody test was just as accurate.

Tea, chocolate

Also worth Botting was that the llama's caffeme-specific antibodies could distinguish between caffeine and caffeine-like chemicals such as theobromine and theophyllme, which are found in tea and chocolate. This meant that any tests for caffeine wouldn't be skewed by similar chemicals in the beverage

"Now that we've isolated the sequence of this stable annicaffeine antibody, we can produce copies in the lab. .[and] we don't need to rely on the animals," Ladenson noted in a

BDO shelves merger plan for now

Banco de Oro this year expects to post net income of P3.1B

By Elizabeth L. Sanchez

BANCO DE ORO UNIVERSAL Bank of mall taipan Henry Sy St. still wants to merge with third largest Equitable PCI Bank but, for now, it has put on hold all merger offers, BDO president Nestor Tan yesterday said in a press briefing.

Tan said that BDO is still willing to talk about plans concerning Equitable PCI Bank-now dominated by the SM Group-if shareholders are open to the pro-

He stressed however that "this was not a [formal] offer" for a merger.

"At the moment, yes, we are abandoning our proposal to swap BDO shares for Equitable PCI shares," Tan said. "Our willingness to talk is not an offer. We are willing to talk, but there is no offer at the moment."

Tan yesterday admitted that other shareholders of Equitable PCI have not looked favorably on BDO's merger proposal.

"We put in more than P1 billion in [Equitable PCI], and we can't just forget about it," Tan added. "Our long-term plan is still for consolidation Other shareholders don't want it. In the meantime, we have put [the merger plans) in the backburner and focus on organic growth."

Tan said the bank expects to grow its net income to P3.1 bilnon this year from P2.54 billion in 2005 despite anemic loan growth.

Growth will largely be driven by deposits, the expansion of its business via additional branches from recently acquired United Overseas Bank (UOB), as well as income from

BDO has recently completed the integration of UOB into its wing, which has resulted in the growth of the number of branches to 224

Following the acquisition, BDO will have expanded its reach to include key provincial areas such as Baguio, Batangas, Dagupan, Davao and Ilouo.

Aboitiz eyes more efficient ships as fuel costs dampen financials

By Daxim L. Lucas

THE COUNTRY'S LARGEST commercial shipping line is shopping for new vessels to cut down on fuel costs amid the high price of crude oil in the international market that has further widened its losses in the first quarter.

The board of directors of Aboitiz Transport System Corp. is now evaluating several reflecting proposals, according to its chairman Jon Ramon Aboitiz, shortly after he attended the company's annual meeting.

"So far, the only decision we've made is to ... rationalize (operations] and look for more fuel efficient vessels," Aboitiz said. "[As to] what type of vessels, that is still being studied at this time."

At present, the company operates a total of 14 vessels -- 11 in us SuperFerry fleet plus three in its Cebu Perry line-which are aland youngest commercial ships operating in the country.

ATSC's vessels carry a mix of passengers and cargo to destinations nationwide.

With a downtime rate of only 0.015 percent, About said the company's efficiency level can already be considered "world-class."

"As a whole, we have pretty efficient vessels," he said. "But you have to keep in mind that however efficient your vessels are, with fuel cost at $70 per barrel, it has an impact on your bottom line."

In the first quarter of the year, ATSC posted a net loss of P192.4 million from ioss of P167.2 miltion in the same period in 2005.

Aboitiz emphasized that the company is now looking for ways to save on fuel on top of merely buying more fuel-efficient slups and retiring less efficient ones.

"We're looking at different ready some of the most efficient ways of becoming more efficient in order to negate the very big increases that we've had in fuel," the ATSC chairman said. "It's very hard. Anybody who's in the fuel intensive business is having difficulty."

Where ATSC's fuel costs stood at only 25 percent of total revenues, it now stands at 39 percent due to rising fuel costs.

He said, however, that the company's good cash flow have helped it weather the storm, giving it enough elbow room to even reduce its debt burden.

"We're reducing our debt," he said, adding that the repayment was sourced from internally-generated funds. "Last year, it was [a reduction of over P300 million."

During the stockholders' meeting, the ATSC board also approved an option to convert preferred shares to common shares to increase its capital.

GFI loans for SMEs reach P7.9B in Q1 Filinvest sets aside

By Christine A. Gaylican

GOVERNMENT FINANCIAL INstitutions (GPIs) in the first quarter issued some P7.9 bilhon in loans to small and medium scale enterprises employing an estimated 98,336 Filipinos nationwide

According to Zorayda Amelia C. Alonzo, Trade and Industry undersecretary for SME development, the Land Bank of the Philippines led the list of GFIs when it offered a total of P3 7 billion in loans to SME clients. The Development Bank of the Philippines followed with P3.1 billion in loans. The others were the Philippine Export Import Credit Agency (Ph.lExim) with some P62 million, the Small Business Guarantee and Finance Corp. (SB Corp.), with P829 million, the Quedan Rural Credit and Guarantee Corp.

(Ouedancor) with P92 million, and the National Livelihood Support Fund (NLSF) with P13 9 million

Alonzo said that with the first quarter loan figure, a total of P93.28 billion has been offered under the SME Unified Lending Opportunities for Nanonal Growth (Sulong) Pro-

The program aims to provide SMEs with easier credit access.

"That should be able to translate into half a million jobs, roughly the same as last year," said Alonzo, who is also chairperson and chief executive officer of SB Corp.

For the first quarter, according to Alonzo, 678 SMEs were given technical assistance on product development in order to join trade shows, including the National Trade Pair, Tarlac Furniture Show, Fashion Week and Go Negosyo Summit.

"With the product innovations, it must be noted that some P19 million has been earned by participating SMEs during the National Trade Pair alone," she said

Another program the government is pushing is the One Town One Product-Philippines THE GOTIANUN-LED FILINVEST (Otop-Philippines) Program.

The program aims to promote entrepreneutship and create jobs. It also encourages the country's micro, small and medium enterprises to produce and market distinct products or services using indigenous raw materials and manpower.

Through Otop-Philippines, local government executives will take the lead in identifying, developing, and promoting a specific product or service which has a competitive advan-

FLI on the other hand plans to launch new middle income residential projects this year, such as The Pines at South Peak in Laguna, Spring Heights 2 in Quezon City and Ashton Fields in Laguna.

The Filmvest Group is also developing what it hopes will become Cebu's premiere seaside residential resort on a 12-bectare dubbed property, Seascapes Resort Town. This will be scheduled for launch this year. Elizabeth L. Sanches

Fitch exec says rating upgrade

the bottom of the heap," he noted. The lowest was Costa Rica's, be

"(Growth in revenues) is happening but at a slower pace compared with other countries," he told reporters. He added that while revenues in many countries were above 20 percent of GDP, revenueto-GDP ratio in the Philippenes remained below the benchmark.

The Philippines' revenue-to-2004 and only slightly improved to 14.8 percent last year.

The Philippine government has kept its cash budget deficits within target since the start of the year and even chalked up a budget surplus in April of P17.6 billion, but there was a shortfall in the collection of the main tax agency Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The April budget surplus stood five times higher than the P3.3 billion surplus seen in the same month of 2005, while the deficit for the first four months of PSG billion was below the P60.1-billion deficit in the same period of last

"In terms of overall revenue efficiency, we still have lingering concerns on the way the government is achieving that (fiscal target), it's more through spending restraint, which is a very good thing but lest you increase revenue which we still continue to consider a fundamental weakness, it's actually disappointing, to be honest," McCormack said.

"We really love to see the gains GDP ratio stood at 14.5 percent in moving forward to be more on the revenue side rather than the expenditure side," he stressed.

McCormack stressed that be was not suggesting any further increase in tax rates as those rates-such as on the VAT and the corporate income tax-were already comparable with other countries in the region.

"But the efforts that are underway to increase collection need to be stepped up, followed up and we really need to see progress on that," he said, citing the need to see more tangible results in reducing rax evasion and avoidance.

He said there had been a lot of "fanfare" in the campaign to prosecute tax evaders but this would have to result in actual improvement in revenues. Over the medium term, he said reducing the deficits through expenditure cuts would not be sustamable given recurring spending

So if the revenue is not there, either the deficit goes up or the spending doesn't happen and that has implication for economic growth and overall economic picture," McCormack said. He said Fitch Ratings had assumed in its current ratings that the Philippines would meet its VAT collection target, so it would take much more progress in fiscal consolidation to merit an improvement in the ratings.

Among the three most influential global credit rating agencies, Firch Ratings keeps the highest rating on Philippine sovereign debt of two notches below investment grade. Standard & Poor's rates the Philippine sovereign credit at three notches below investment grade and Moody's, at four notches below investment grade.

Exporters optimistic, look to sustain growth

Demand for electronics rising in Asia; weak peso helping

OPTIMISM AMONG PHILIPPINE able growth. exporters is growing after years of tepid performance and it's not just down to strong global demand for electronics, the country's main export.

Increased investment, firm demand from Ch na and a more stable economic backdrop all suggest exports are starting to make a break from the past-as long as government and industry seize the opportunity to lock in the

"I would like to believe this is the start of a trend and most export items seem to be doing well," said Sergio Ortiz Luis, president of the Philippine Exporters Confederation.

Exports in the first quarter crimbed 13.8 percent from a year earber.

. March's annual rise of 26 percent was the biggest for a single month in 6 1/2 years.

In the last six years, the Philippines has seen its share of total Asian exports decline.

In 2005, its share was less than 2-percent, the lowest in Asia.

Economists said a pick-up should be seen in the context of strong demand for electronics that is boosting exports across Asia, with the Philippines having a long way to go toward sustain-

But they added there were more reasons to be hopeful than six months ago, including a weakening of the peso.

The peso has fallen more than 3 percent since May 8 to almost 53 per dollar, and this could provide some comfort to Philippine firms that have suffered from currency strength in the past year.

The value of exports—which also include garments, vehicle parts, coconut oil, fruit and wooden furniture—is equivalent to about 40 percent of Philippine gross domestic product, so a sharp pick-up would mean a sigraficant boost to the economy.

Arthur Young, president of the Semiconductor and Riectronics Industries in the Philippines Inc., said growth in semiconductor exports could double in 2006 to more than 15 percent.

Electronics, largely assembled from imported parts, comprise up to two-thirds of total exports.

As investment in electronics nses, growth in exports should follow, Young said.

Spending on expansion by electronics firms in the Philippines was expected to continue an uptrend this year after rising 76 percent to $776 million in 2005 and 63 percent in 2004.

mance before, it was because investment was low," said Young.

2006 has started well because investment is strong."

Young, also chief executive at PSi Technologies Inc., a maker of power conversion chips, said his firm would likely invest $5-to-8 million this year to expand its facilities, up from $4-to-5 million

The Philippines, like its Asian neighbors, faces tough competition from China's low-cost, massproduction base.

For example, in late 2004 Japan's Toshiba Corp. closed its Philippine laptop computer facility and moved it to China.

But China also offered opportunities for exporters.

Orniz Laus pointed to Chinese demand for Philippine agricultural products.

Firms in the garments sector were adjusting to Chinese competition and other companies were also providing support services to foreign businesses, he said.

Five years ago, we were hardly moving anything to China, but in the last two years our average growth rate in exports to China has been between 50 and 70 percent," said Ortiz Latis.

Economists said the Philip-

"If you look at the poor perfor- pines still needs to do much more, including widening its export base and improving infras-

> One risk is that the country's export mix is dominated by the same kind of electronics products that China excels in producing.

The Philippines supplies about 10 percent of the world's semiconductor manufacturing services needs, including mobile phone chips and nucro proces-

The Philippenes is concentrated in one sort of chips," said Annina Kaltenbrunner, economist for Asia-Pacific at Global Insight in

"If demand gets diverted from this one technology the Philippines is producing, this could represent a major risk."

Peter Wallace, president of consulting firm Wallace Business Forum, said the Philippines should develop ruche áreas such as mining and agriculture, and invest more in English language skills, if it wanted to attract for-

"Mining is an advantage. China has huge demand for minerals and is showing interest in the Philippines. It would be silly to ignore thus," he said. "We are seeing all the right signals." Reuters

THE PHILIPPINES is trying to go beyond merely assembling semiconductors and other electronic exports and enter the highvalue stage of designing and inventing electronics.

PNOC in talks with 3 firms on Palawan

By Abigail L. Ho

PHILIPPINE NATIONAL OIL CO. EXPLORATION Corp. (PNOC-EC) is currently negotiating with two foreign firms and one local company for possible farm-in agreements in two petroleum blocks off Palawan.

PNOC EC president and chief executive Eduardo Mana.ac said the state firm was currently in talks with Australian from TAP Oil Ltd and Swedish company Lundin Oil Ltd. for a potential farm in agreement in Service Contract 59 covering the West Balabac area.

"They're looking at the data. We're at the early stage of discussions with these firms,"

The state firm is also in discussions with Nido Petroleum Philippines Pty. Ltd. for another farm-in agreement, this time in SC 58 covering the West Calamian block.

Mana.ac said N do Petroleum would likely have a 50-percent working interest in the petroleum block, should a farm-in agreement be finalized

"Nido negotiations with PNOC for possible farm-in are well advanced," Nido Petroleum said in a presentation posted on its official website

Nido Petrojeum was "fine" with PNOC-EC, he said, as the two firms aiready had an existing partnership to develop a petroleum block in an area in Southwest Palawan that the Department of Energy had yet to formally award.

For this new petroleum block, which was included in the DOE's Philippine Energy Contracting Round 2005, the PNOC-EC and Nido Petrojeum partnership was among the three groups given "priority consideration" due to its financial, legal and technical capabilities in developing the area.

Energy Undersecretary Guillermo Balce said in an earlier interview that the DOE should be ready to award the PNOC-Nido contract soon, maybe even this week.

Other groups given "priority consideration" were Burgundy Global Asset Management Corp. for an area in Northeast Palawan and another in Southeast Palawan and the partnership between Ranhill Bhd, and Phil Mal Petroenergy Corp. for an area in the Sulu Sea basin.

RP posts $89-M BOP surplus.

By Doris C. Dumlao

THE PHILIPPINES RECORDED A BALANCE of payment surplus of $89 million in March, bringing up the first-quarter surplus to $2.12 billion or more than double the surplus posted in the same perior last year, the Bangko Sentrai ng Pilipinas said yesterday.

The BOP surplus for the month of March, however, marked a slowdown from the $107-mi don simplus seen in February.

The BOP measures the foreign exchange transactions between the domestic economy and the rest of the world.

Borrowings, exports and remittances are counted as surplus items, while payments for imports and debt servicing are considered deficit items.

The surplus in March means that more money came in than went out.

Since the start of the year, the country's BOP has been supported by the national government's increased foreign exchange deposits with BSP from its bond sales and project loans, the BSP's own foreign exchange operations, inflows from foreign private investments and overseas Fil.puno workers remittances.

The BOP surplus was also in line with the surge in the country's foreign exchange reserves to a record high of $20.91 billion at

The BSP, for its part, took advantage of the strong inflows by beefing up its gross international reserves.

Nationwide roadshow kicks off in Cauayan, Isabela

By Ronnel W. Domingo

THE BOARD OF INVESTMENTS HAS embarked on a nationwide roadshow to reach out to micro and small enterprises as the government steps up of forts to promote business activities and job creation in the provinces.

Trade Undersecretary Eimer C. Hernandez, who is also BOI managing head, said the campaign kicked off earlier this month in Cauayan, Is-Hemandez said the BOI was able to process and approve incentives for a total of 12 projects based in Isabe.a, Nueva Vizcaya and Cagayan worth a combined P183 million.

Expected to create 170 new jobs, the projects cover the sector of agromarine and forest based products, information and communication technology services, tourism, and health and wellness

The biggest of the projects in terms of cost and jobs are the medical facianes of the Santiago City-based De Vera's Medical Center and Renmar Drugs & Hospital Supplies, worth P29 million and P26 million, respectively.

De Vera's project is expected to create 38 jobs while Renmar would open Padilia's P79 25 million food and agricultural products terminal would open up only 10 jobs.

"Since the system for attracting foreign investments into the country is well in place, it is now the time to gear our efforts toward investment promotions in the regions," he explained

The official said the approval of the projects was fast-tracked following the streamlining of the application process under the so-called one-day registration scheme.

Hernandez added that certain requirements were relaxed to allow micro and small sized businesses to qualify for fiscal incentives, which include tax holidays and duty-free importation of capital equipment.

The government classifies businesses with assets worth up to P3 mil-Lon as micro enterprises and those with between P3 million and P15 mil hon as small.

"(For this campaign), businesses need not be involved in the export market," Hernandez said "Applicants need only to be engaged in the priority sectors listed in the Investment Priprities Plan "

The 11 investment areas include agri-business; healthcare and well-

On the other hand, Teodorico P ness products and services, information and communications technology' electronics; motor vehicle products, energy, infrastructure; tourism, shipbuilding/shipping, jewelry; and fashion garments.

Aside from these preferred activities, other areas included in the IPP are specifically required under existing laws.

Covered by mandatory inclusion are industrial tree plantations, from and stee, projects; exploration, minmg, quarrying and processing of minerals; publication or printing of books or textbooks, and refining, storage, marketing and distribution of petroleum products

Moreover, the IPP covers activities involved in the ecological solid waste. management; the provision of clean water those covered in bilateral agreements; and those involving the rehabilitation, self-development and self-reliance of disabled persons.

Further, Hernandez said the BOI now allows that the pre-registration requirement of publishing a notice of application be done through a local gazette or regional newspaper or through bulletin boards in municipal, provincial or city halls instead of a national publication with general circulation

NTC set to lift ban on spam

By Daxim L. Lucas

TELECOMMUNICATIONS REGULATORS MAY aft the moratorium on commercial text messages being broadcast over cellular phone networks by next month after it managed to iron out the most contentious issues with mobile phone firms and their content providers

In an interview, National Telecommunica-Lons Commission (NTC) chief Ronald O. Solis said a finalized memorandum circular governing the use of so-called "text spam" may be released as early as next week.

"We will lift [the ban] once we issue the revised circular," he said, adding that he did not want any further delays that would affect legitimate commerce in the sector

Solis explained that the new rules would distribute the burden of regulating text spam equally between mobile phone firms and their external content providers to el m nate finger pointing between the two

"We are pressuring them both to comply," he sa d

Mounting complaints

To date, the NTC has received close to a thousand complaints from the public because of the text spam.

Many complainants claim that they are bilied for receiving unso icited text messages and commercia, broadcasts, while some complain of the inconvenience of receiving these messages, many of which are sent late at

When confronted with these issues by regalators, telecommunications firms often point to their third-party content providers as the culprits behind the "violations."

Under the new rules, Sons said that content providers found violating the text spam guidel nes may be blacklisted or suspended by regulators.

At worst, they will be permanently barred from doing business within the telecommunications system in the future

"Telecommunications firms, on the other hand, will be penalized," the NTQ chief said, aithough he added that the proposed penalty structure is still being f nal.zed

The remaining issue that needs to be, ironed out is the hotime number which the NTC will set up jointly with the telecommunications firms to receive complaints from the

Universal number

On top of being a complaints hotline, the universal phone number will also be made available to members of the public who may want to verify the veracity of suspected "text scams" sent to them via their mobile phones.

Users will pay a small fee to access to the house number and the revenues from this operation will be shared proportionally between the regulator and the telecommunications firms.

Sous said that the fee is not meant to help the NTC make money but only to cover the administrative expenses of running a hotline operation

Despite the fact that kinks in the hotline system have yet to be ironed out, Solis said he plans to release the revised rules by next

"I don't want this to be delayed only because of the hotline issue," he said "We can provide a temporary hotline for com-

2015 PROJECTION

Retirement villages 40B, generate 4

By Tessa R. Salazar

DRAMATIC SHIFT IN selected countries' demographics in the near future could bring in at least 859,000 foreign retiree arrivals to the Philippines. That number represents less than one percent of the 869.1 million projected retirees the developed world will produce between 2006 and 2015

Foreseeing nearly a billion retirees looking for a place to spend the rest of their lives, the local retirement industry, especially property developers, are being urged to prepare for at least nearly a million retirees from Korea, Japan, China, Taiwan, the United States, Canada and other European countries and even former Filip nos or "balikbayans" with dual citizenships looking forward to spend the twinght of their lives back to their home, and

Housing demand

The main participant, which is the real estate industry, is projected to have 859,000 housing demand either lease or purchase for the next 10 years

The retirement industry is projected to hit the target foreign exchange receipts at a cumulative $40 billion, with 4 million jobs generated by 2015, making the Philippines a major retirement haven in Southeast Asia for foreigners

"We don't have a retirement industry right now. SHDA (Subdivision and Housing Developers Association) is spearheading the creation of the industry. If we'll not work as a team, we cannot compete with Thailand and Malaysia-two of the main destinations of retirees," said Noel Gonzales, summit chair and director of the Philippine Retrement Industry. PRI is a private sector organization composed of real estate, health care and lifestyle group.

Industry blueprint

He added that the summit for the retirement industry culminating on July 3 m Shangn La Makati will create a blueprint for the retirement industry.

Government agency Philippine Retirement Authority and private entity PRI revealed that the other infrastructure necessary for the influx of the retiree market are health and insurance facilities (24-hour clinics, hospitals, airlift ambulance services); 24-bour security arrangements; and recreational, cultural and educational and travel/transportation services.

AL these infrastructure and services, the two agencies said, could be integrated into a so-called "retirement village" so that members would have easier access to such services and facilities.

Gen. Edgardo Agbpay, chair of the PRA and Gonzales are scheduled to present plans for the retirement industry to President Macapagai-Arroyo on Tues-

Big 5 developers

Ernesto Ordonez, incoming presi-

dept of the PRI, revealed that initially his group has already united the "Big 5" developers-Gottanum, property Gokongwei, Sy, Ayala and Tan-to be part of the group

Aglipay stressed that the first wave of retirees coming to the Philippines is crucial for the country's subsequent success in the retirement industry. Thus, he said, it would be necessary to get the support of big names that bave the reputation, experience and capability to produce what are needed for the retirement communities.

"They have the condominiums, hospitals, banks, almost everything that a retirement industry needs. It's just integrating what they have to be able to provide the total retirement services." he said.

Retirement 'hotspots'

Prospective retirement "hotspots" have been identified in Luzon, Visayas and Mindanao. These include Metro Clark, Metro Subic, Baguio, Tagaytay, Batangas, Laguna, Cavite, Cebu, Bohol, Bacolod, Palawan, Davao and Cagayan de Oro.

Philippines include pension payment increases in developed countries amounting $1,000 to $1,500 per individual would be insufficient to live on in such countries; family support systems for older people are eroding because of smaller families and a highly mobile population; and the inevitability of mass migration.

Another objective that the groups hope to achieve is the reverse migration of Filipino caregivers.

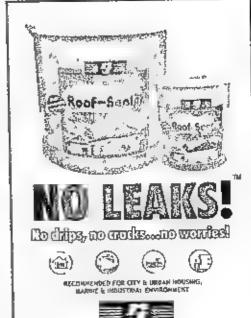

By 2025, the number of people aged 60 and over will be highest in Japan, Iraly and Germany.

[20-ha, retirement village

Meanwhile, a retirement village in Bantay, Ilocos Sur, is in the drawing boards as revealed recently by Ilocos Sur Gov. Luis Chavit Singson to the IN-OURER.

Over 120 hectares of rolling hills in Bantay, a town near Vigan, have already been surveyed

"It will be retirement homes for different nationalities like Koreans, Germans and Taiwanese. And then right at the center of the community would be Gonzales revealed that the reasons mall facilities-movie houses and su-would have to be oil, which is a derivative of petroleum. Petroleum is a complex substance formed beneath the earth's surface over centuries of many different materials' being subjected to decay, intense heat and very high pressure. This petroleum is then Amado de Jesus refined to break it down into its many usable components, such as oil, plastics and asphalt. At the rate of human consumpnon of oil, however, the supplies of petroleum underground are rapidly nearing depletion. This is partly why oil prices are always going up: it is because the supply is decreasing while demand is increasing.

Coupled with its scarcity, the extraction and burning of fossil fuels contribute to global warming. In fact, fossil fuel-fired electricity generation is the single greatest source of air pollufrom in countries like the United States. Power plants are the leading source of carbon drowde emissions, a primary contributor to global warming. Burning fossil fuels may also cause cancer and other chronic health problems. Their use degrades the valuable land and water resources from which they are extracted.

Renewable energy

Faced with an impending scarcity of oil, the world is now turning-too slow, many experts believe-to the technologies and scientific developments that produce energy without the use of fossil fuels. This energy is called renewable energy which is any form of energy produced and rapidly replaced by natural processes. It is therefore sustainable and will never run out

Benefits

Other than the primary benefit of renewable energy which is its practically unlimited supply. there are other advantages to be gained by switching over from the fossil fuels.

Renewable energy is cost-effective. After making a substantial initial investment on technology that produces renewable energy, elec-tricity costs will be cheaper in the long run.

Renewable energy forms

Fossil fuels need to be burned in order to produce energy. This causes harmful emissions and pollution that renewable energy sources do not produce. Instead, they usually involve natural processes occurring in nature such as water plunging down a waterfall and ocean's waves pushing toward the land. Here are some forms of renewable energy

 Wind energy The sun heats the earth but this heat is not

MOST, IF NOT ALL, COUNTRIES CURRENTLY temperature and pressure differences which rely on fossil fuels such as coal, oil and natural makes air move in the direction of lower pressure, and this is what we call wind.

Wind energy can be stored through the use of wind turbines. Wind turbines have sails connected to a rotating shaft in such a way that when the wind blows, the sails turn. The sails' The most widely used of these fossil fuels movement then makes the shaft turn and this motion generates mechanical energy that can be transformed into electrical power.

This form of renewable energy is quickly gaining acceptance around the world. Wind turbines are placed in windy areas, so that energy can be generated without the use of fossil fuels, and this also increases the value of idle land.

Water energy

Water energy is roughly a thousand times heavier than air. If the wind can rotate turbines, then so can water, if placed in the right location.

There are many forms of water energy, but most of them use the natural movement of water, such as the tides, waves in the ocean and waterfalls just like in our Maria Cristina Falls in

The run's heat can be absorbed by photovoltaic cells inside solar panels. The heat is then converted into usable electricity. Also, the heat absorbed during the day can also be stored and used for heating at night.

It is becoming a common occurrence to see solar panels on roofs of houses for heaters and even on calculators because solar power is generally convenient for use in small quantities.

Geothermal energy

Just as the Romans used naturally warm spring water for their baths, the temperatures of water beneath the earth are also a source of en-

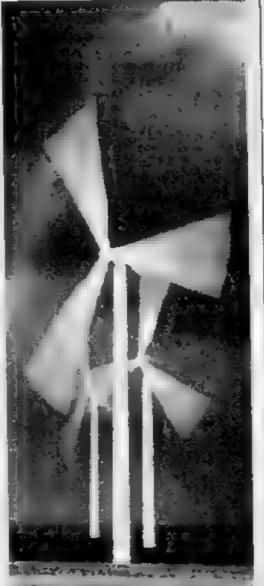

Heat beneath the earth increases underground water's temperature. Examples of such are not springs and geysers. The water here can then be turned into steam which moves a turbine, causing it to generate electricity. This sort of power is produced in our Tiwi geothermal power plant in Albay.

Brofuel is defined as any form of fuel that comes from organic materials. The best example of this would be wood. Wood is burned to provide heat energy, and it is still renewable because trees can be planted again to ensure a supply of wood for burning.

Liquid biofitel like ethanol and biodiesel is usually sourced from plants. It can be mixed with gasoline to provide energy while minimizing the depletion of underground oil.

Biogas is gas released by organic matter that can be used for heating and electricity. For example, ammal waste releases methane due to bacterial action. This gas can then be used to produce energy.

have many disadvantages that still need to be then will any structure be truly green.

WIND energy is collected by spinning wind turbines. It is a renewable energy source because it does not use up any resource that may be depleted like oil. Instead, it has a practically unlimited supply of wind for it to generate power.

worked out. (Solar panels can only collect the sun's heat during the day, and are usually expensive. Wind turbines can only turn when there is wind, and need to cover a lot of ground.) However, they should be a welcome alternative to fossil fuels and consumers should do what they can to support the development of renewable energy technology.

For as long as renewable energy sources minimize human energy consumption's impact on the natural environment, their extensive use Renewable energy sources are still new. They should be a long-term goal for builders. Only

CAMP JOHN HAY IN BAGUIO IS Reasons for buying fast becoming the desunation of choice for families looking for a place to spend quality vacation time and those who are planning to spend vacation on a more permanent basis. Real estate properties inside the former US rest and recreation resort have attracted locals, as well as foreigners, since it was opened to the public in the late

'90s. Best sellers are the Camp John Hay Manor and Suites Condotels; elegant residential homes such as the Country Homes and Forest Cabins; and the residential estate lots. All of these are available on a long-term lease and a first comefirst served basis.

THE 1.2 KILOMETERS of fine sand beach comprises the main cove of Anvaya, the perfect

Camp John Hay unit owners cite the resort's peacefulness, relaxing atmosphere, clean air and security as the main reasons for these decision to purchase real estate properties in the area. While traffic and pollution have become major concerns for Baguio residents, in Camp John Hay these problems are nonexistent.

The Camp John Hay Condotels such as the Manor, and the Suites are the hot picks of buyers because of their affordability and special benefits.

The Camp John Hay Manor has a total of 189 units while the Camp John Hay Suites has 278 rooms.

These Condotel facilities have three kinds of units: studio unit, which has an average floor area of 40 square meters; one-bedroom suite with an average Boor area of 80 sq m; and two-bedroom suite reaching a total floor area of 145 sq m. The Camp John Hay Manor, which is now on its 4th year of operations is (almost) always fully booked especially during peak seasons like the Christmas holidays, Holy Week and summer.

Estate lots

There are also estate lots where buyers can build their dream house from among the country log designs or create a new design with Camp John Hay's master architect, RRPayumo + Partners. There are 49 lots scattered in prime areas in the whole Camp. The smallest is around 400 sq on while the biggest is around 1,300 sq m. Prices range from P4 to P16 milbon based on the special price tag of P9,500 per square meter on cash transactions, and as much as P12,500 on terms.

Also available are residential homes such as the single-detached Country Homes located in the vicinity of the golf course and near the golf clubhouse and the Porest Cabins, medium-size duplex units located in Scout Hill are also available. The Forest Cabins, each with an autic, have a gross floor area of 150 sq m. They are priced between P9 and P10 million.

WHAT DO THE GMA 7 BUILDING, SM MALL OF ASIA, THE FAR EASTern University's new building, Alliw Theatre and the Harbour View Complex have in common? They were all built with M2 panels—a revolutionary construction technology that will shield them from the natural elements that plaque our country.

M2 panel technology is a groundbreaking approach to architecture in the new millennium. It has the following benefits.

Energy-saving Since the SM Mall of Asia was built with M2 panels, which have a central layer of one of the best insulating materials ever invented, energy will be saved and properly utilized

Money-saving. M2 panel technology cuts down on cost by as much as 25 percent. Designed for a minimum workforce, it reduces the steps in traditional construction that are tedious and time-con-

 Soundproof M2 panels have superior accoustic quality that leads to significant noise reduction.

 Pest-free. Families building their dream home in Santa Rosa Heights or Governor's Hills need not worry about termites or other household pests because polystyrene does not attract any microor-

Philbex seminar in Cebu City

AS A DESCENDANT OF AN IMPERIAL FENG SHUI MASTER OF THE LEgendary Ming Dynasty, Master Khoon Yong Tan could just stick to the tradisons of ancient Chinese leng shul customs and restrain himself from all demands for change. However, he embraced modern technology with utmost tervor and considered it important to further enhance people's lives.

In this year's Philippine Building and Construction Exposition (Philbex), which is slated from May 26 to 28 at the Ayala Center in Cabu City, Tan hopes to convey his objectives to the movers of the industry and inspire them of the wonders of technology and advanced knowledge in feng shul in the construction business. He will be part of the highlighted free seminars on May 27 along with Jose Ma. "Johnny" Hubilla, president of Hubilla Design Group and architect Gi bert Yu

Philhex seminars, conducted by Worldbax Services Internationat[Tel: Nos. 531-6350, 531-6374 or (032) 343-9620 (Cebu)], conthrough set impetus for new innovations and better opportunities for the professionals of the construction industry. These seminars bring together respected and thriving pros to share Ideas with each other for the development and empowerment of the trade

PRAYER DEDICATION

The Active Group recently held a prayer dedication and tree planting activity for the La Salle Townhomes, which is within its Town & Country Heights subdivision in Antipole. Among the special guests, from left, are Bro. Dante Jose Amisola, FSC; Manolo Alcasabas, director, Active Group; Bro. Emmanuel Hilado, FSC, architect Cristina Valera-Turalba, vice chair, Active Group; and Bro. Jaime Dalumpines, FSC.

FILIPINAS FORM AND LAND CORP (FF Land) LAUNCHES VILLA STA. Monica, a one-of-a-kind residential property development to Angat, Bulacan for those seeking to reconnect with their distinctive roots amid a secure and serene environment, FF Land (Tel. Nos 671-9950 to 53 local 109, 671-5871) is the real estate management and marketing arm of FF Cruz & Co.

Villa Sta Monica is FF Cruz & Co.'s inspired offering for Angateños and Bulakeños who highly regard the invaluable experiences of reliving their rich heritage and rediscovering the profound meaning of their faith

Villa Sta. Monica provides modestly priced home tots in a wellplanned 14-hectare area that is now Angat's best developed residecital offering

A landscaped entrance forms the welcome sign for residents and visitors in this subdivision with a spacious multipurpose center. A commercial strip at one side of its frontage beckens to entrepreneurial activity.

Village facilities include basketball, tennis, volleyball and badminton courts, a landscaped children's playground, a pionic area tree-lined pathways and an open meditation garden. A perimeter wall encloses the subdivision that has 10- to 12-meter wide concrete roads, sidewalk curbs and gutter

Villa Sta. Monica is situated on Encanto-Pandi Road and is accessible from major thoroughfare connecting Bocaue, Sta. Marta, Norzagaray and Guiguinto, Bulacan

Villa Sta. Monica is now offered at incredibly affordable initial public offering, with individual TCTs, and ready for house construcSHOWN (above) during the

AYALA LAND PREMIER RECENTLY HELD groundbreaking rites for the Village Green-the "heart" of Ayala Southvale Village Sonera's community that will serve as an dyllic venue where homeowners can gather for various bonding activities.

Sonera is designed to become a "fenceless community" a village that fosters warmth and neighborly living. At the Village Green, homeowners will find a shared space where they can freely get together for recreation and leasure

Symbolic items

The groundbreaking ceremony was preceded by a Holy Mass led by Msgr. Nico Bautista from the Alfonsus Ligouri Parish, followed by the blessing of the symbolic documents and items. Among the items that were placed in the time capsule by corresponding officials who graced the event were the prosect's land trues by Jong Romero, project manager for Sonera, the development permit by Mel Cruz (senior division manager for ALP Construction Management Group), and the architectural plan by Joel Luna (assistant vice president for Technical Planning Division)

Other items were the landscape plan by Cristy Comia (senior division manager, ALP Construction Management Group, Landscaping Unit), the Environmental Compliance Certificate (ECC) by Jay Caniza (department manager, Technical Planning Division, project architect for Sonera), and the day's newspaper by Dindo Guererro (managing partner of Abesanus Guererro Architects, Sonera's project consultant)

Preview of idyllic life

After the official groundbreaking activities, guests were invited to celebrate the occasion with an "Off-the-Grill" hunch buffet hosted by ALP While the adults sampled the sumptuous barbecue specialnes, kids were left to freely run around the future site of the Village Green flying their kites, and blowing bubbles to their hearts content

This is just a preview of the idyLic life that Sonera will soon be home to," said Jay Camza (department manager for Technical Planning Division) "The fence-free homes will encourage interaction among homeowners. Kids can roam around freely without their parents worrying because they practically know everyone inside the village ALP's state-of-the-art security system will also ensure the safety of every resident inside the village.

Central venue

As the central venue of the community's activities, the Village Green will reflect the design architecture of the homes inside Sonera and will therefore have a contemporary look and feel, said Joet Luna, AVP for Technical Planning Division

"We wanted something fresh-looking, which we don't typically see in other suburban areas. The architecture was made to have cleaner lines, more appear and modern, but still familiar. We particularly chose an architecture that appeals to younger tastes, more cosmopolitan, and fits in with the stature and prestige of Alabang to which Sonera is intrinsical y linked," Luna explained

The Vinage Green complex which occupies almost a hectare will be divided into two structures the multipurpose pavilion or the clubhouse and the indoor courts, with a swimming pool found at the center linking the two facilities. A kids Park will entice children to play all day at the Play Pool, Gazebo and interactive playground, while fitness enthusiasts can tread the Adventure Path for biking, walking, or simply enjoying the landscaped gardens and scenic views.

"Birthdays, meetings and other functions can be held at the pavilion, while sports buffs can ublize the indoor courts. The Village Green will also have a lounge and smaller private function areas where residents can get together for recreational and social events," Caniza added.

The Village Green will basically serve as an "extension" of the homes—a property shared by all the residents, Luna emphasized

Conveniently located at the center of the village, the Village Green harmonizes perfectly with the surroundings, Luna added

Ideal residence

Ayala Southvale Village Sonera is envisioned to be the ideal residence for the younger, growing family. Masterplanned to host approximately 234 lots designed for single-detached houses, the community covers a total area of approximately 21 hectares of prime real estate

Due to its excellent location in the Alabang complex, homeowners will enjoy the advantages of living close to prestigious schools, shopping malls, leading institutions and business districts

Sonera is another project by Ayala Land Premier-the new name for the top-end developments of Ayala Land providing security, u.i.mate comfort and privacy. With its superior customer care and property management, ALP (tel. no. 728-7000) ensures exclusivity and varue over time

Construction Show Cebu opens doors to opportunities

By Charles E. Buban

ARDWARE SUPPLIERS AND MANUfacturers nationwide see much po-L tential for markets in the Visayas and Mindanao region where wealth is steadily growing, where families are keen to buy new homes and where more and more people are pursuing upgrades or making renovations.

This was announced by L. A. Ducut and Co., the organizer of the largest and biggest construction expo in southern Philippines, which is scheduled to open next week.

These trends continue to prevail despite some concerns over our economy" said Lilibeth Ducut-Abais of LA Ducut and Co. (constructionshow@laducut.com), who told the media that the 14th Construction Show Cebu will be open from June 2 to 5 at the Trade Hall of SM City Cebu

"This event will allow visitors to get a glimpse of the latest construction materials and technology that may provide solutions to get their projects done right and on time. Be a part of the 'country's largest construction expo in the re-

Generating opportunities

She added that the annual event generates hardware and home construction business.

"This is equally true for the Philippine manufacturers displaying their unique, new products to the world and for multinational exhibitors entering the fast-expanding markets of the Asian region," she said.

Among the exhibitors in the forthcoming event are the GT Stoneworks which markets natural-stone alternatives that create a unique feel to any home structure and Ro-Plast which sells uPVC glass paneled doors and windows that reduce noise and pollution while at the same time possess excellent insulation properties (translating to less electricity consumption on summer months and better heat retention during cold or rainy days)

"We even have exhibitors like Globe International Distributor Inc. which distributes Pauntless Mortise Locks that offers a revolutionary titanium antitarnish coating," added Ducut

Another exhibitor is Boral's EchoStop Plasterboard which offers acoustic and decorative solution for walls and ceilings designed for applications requiring the highest esthetic considerations while maintaining excellent sound absorption capabilities.

Illuminate and purify

"Equally interesting are these products from Eontec Biolyte that doesn't only illuminate a room but also purify the air around it," said Ducut adding that GE Lighting Systems will also be presenting its latest energy-efficient yet high intensity discharging lighting foctures.

Ducat also enumerated several bathroom package and fixture providers like Villeroy & Boch Pure Stone collection that offers chic pebble-like water closets and lavatories and source flow tap fitting; Loop and Friends washbasins with its New Wave design, and Toto's Savanna Lavatory with its multifunction wash basin with auromatic sensor faucets.

The 14th Construction Show Cebu is sponsored by APO Premium Quality, Bostik Philippines Inc., BusinessWorld, Alcordo Advertising. Sunstar Publications Network and Savers Builders & Architects Professional Magazine and the Phiappine Daily Inquirer.

Filinvest Land to unveil new luxury bome collection

BRENTVILLE INTERNATIONAL COMmunity, the world class residential development for expatriate and Filipino families of leading property developer Filmvest Land Inc. (FLI), will unveil its new luxury home collection called "The Masterpieces" tomorrow, with two house and lot models that best exemplify "the art of fine living."

At the formal launch of The Masterpieces at Brentville, FLI president Joseph Yap and top company officials will lead in the unveiling ceremonies at 10 a.m., while various family and art activities take place until 5

Children can join the "Paint like Da Vinci" contest while invited visual artists sketch portraits of guests and Brentville residents. Meanwhile, interested buyers attending the event can take advantage of a complimentary trip for four persons to Boracay Island.

'First homes'

inspired by some of the greatest works of art in recent history. The Masterpieces are unscale single-detached homes aptly named Madonna and Mona Lisa.

Primarily marketed as "first homes" embodying the privileged suburban lifestyle, the Masterpieces have wider lot areas of 316 square meters and are located within the exclusive subcommunities of Prominence 2 and Woodmore Spring at Brentville.

"The Masterpieces are our limited offerings this year for expannate and Filippino families, including active retirees, looking for tastefully designed homes that are smaller in scale and therefore priced lower," said FLI's project group head Julian Concepcion Jr.

Mediterranean architecture

Consistent with the "sunny Southern Califorman ambience" of Brentville, the Masterpieces are elegandy designed along the lines of Mediterranean architecture, exuding timeless appeal and superior craftsmanship. It also bossts of superior space plannung, construction and finishing works all throughout the usable floor areas of 231 square meters for Madonna and 186 sq m for Mona Lasa Concepcion said each Masterpiece home "artfully blends a myriad of textures, rich earth-tone colors, attractively died roofs, quainc front porches and handsomely accented windows," which all complement the natural beauty of its surroundings.

2 home models

The captivating two-level Madonna, the bigger Masterpiece home priced between P8.2 million and P17 million, offers families with growing households three bedrooms, including a master's suite with a walk-incloses, an arry family hall, a viewing balcony and meticulously designed spaces for a cozy living area, a practical kitchen with a service area, a maid's room with a separate toilet and bath, a powder room, storage area, a carport, porch and tanat

On the other hand, the Mona Lisa, a charming two-story home priced between P7.5 million and P20.4 million, features three bedrooms and well-defined spaces for living and dining areas, a functional kitchen for the house gourmet, a maid's room and a separate laundry area, a carport, a porch and a lanar. Mona Lisa is perfect for starter families, bachelors, young professionals and

At Prominence 2, expatriate families can even own a Masterpiece home under a Condominium Cenificate of Title (CCI), the first of us kind for a horizontal development in the country. The house-and-iot packages of the Mas-terpieces come at lower cash payment rates but are also available through easy in-house or external financing arrangements with zere-percent deferred payment of up to twoand-a-haif years. Selected loss-only offerings are priced at P9,600 per square meter.

The night before this shoot, everyone was excited, nervous and even nauseous! Kidding. But yeah, we were all excited and nervous. Everyone wanted to make sure they'd give the shoot their all. And they did just that. The rebel hidden inside sweet stylist Pam Quiñones was un-

TO WRITE ON A WEEKLY basis is not as easy as it looks, especially for an ever-evolving youth section like this one.

But three years on-that's close to 150 weekends of light-hearted shoutouts and other risqué inter-ludes we're still at it, leaping out in Technicolor newsprint every Saturday to give you a sweaty bear hug or a friendly upper cut. (Sometimes, we like to do it at the same time. Wink.) Who knew, right?

Snide little Gen Z comments aside, running "a little school paper" such as Super-I stole that metaphor from worldly wordsmith Tals Diaz-has proven to be a huge learning experi-ence, like multiple "Ahal" moments for the price of one. To prevent this anniversary from turning into an annual orgy of self-congratulation though, I'd like to scribble my homage to this surreal journey and, like it or not, pass on those somewhat warped coming-ofage anecdotes to you all.,

On information and inspiration

Like I said, regularly churning out writerly material-yielding genuinely golden (insights along the way is tough. First, you have to wade through worlds of info, set aside the worthy topics in your mind, then TiVo the rest for later use. I have to admit there have been days, weeks even, when I was overwhelmed by all the stuff I could possibly write about that I' went through a creative rigor mortis Result?

Nada, Zip, Wala, Helpl See, it's one thing to unlock the labyrinth of your unconscious, get all the freaky-deaky adolescent stuff out, and "vomit onto a canvas," to quote "Donnie Darko" director Richard Kelly, It's another thing to edit and distill all that to come up with an essay that makes sense, something tight, stylish, and with a distinct point-of-view. Once you get over that hump, however, you'll find that writing can become one of post-post-punk life's greatest pleasures.

After almost three years, I still can't say that I'm a career vet when it comes to cobbling columns. Far from it. But at least, with the frequent discipline I get from pounding on a keyboard like a monkey with a helicopter view on youth calture, I now know the difference between

Gino de la Paz

O WRITE ON A WEEKLY basis is not as easy as it looks, especially for an ever-evolving youth; section like this one.

But three years on-that's close to 150 weekends of light hearted shoutouts and other risqué interludes we're still at it, leaping out in Technicolor newsprint every Saturday to give you a sweaty bear hug or a friendly upper cut. (Sometimes, we like to do it at the same time. Wink.) Who knew, right?

Snide little Gen Z comments aside, running "a little school paper" such as Super-I stole that metaphor from worldly wordsmith Tals Diaz-has proven to be a huge learning experience, like multiple "Ahal" moments for the price of one. To prevent this anniversary from turning into an annual orgy of self-congratulation though, I'd like to scribble my homage to this surreal journey and, like it or not, pass on those somewhat warped coming-ofage anecdotes to you all. ,

On information and inspiration

Like I said, regularly churning out writerly material-yielding genuinely golden (insights along the way-is tough. First, you have to wade through worlds of info, set aside the worthy topics in your mind, then TiVo the rest for later use. I have to admit there have been days, weeks even, when I was overwhelmed by all the stuff I could possibly write about that I went through a creative rigor mortis. Result? Nada, Zip. Wala. Helpl

See, it's one thing to unlock the labyrinth of your unconscious, get all the frenky-deaky adolescent stuff out, and "vomit onto a canvas," to quore "Donnie Darko" director Richard Kelly, it's another thing to edit and distill all that to come up with an essay that makes sense, something tight, stylish, and with a district point-of-view. Once you get over that hump, however, you'll find that writing can become one of post-post-punk life's greatest pleasures.

After almost three years, I still can't say that I'm a career vet when it comes to cobbling columns. Par from it. But at least, with the frequent discipline I get from pounding on a keyboard like a monkey with a helicopter view on youth culture, I now know the difference between at the top of our superpowers list. It's cool being able to see through clothing; to look at the insides of people and tell what's wrong with them. It's fun and easyl

But let me tell you a secret. We all have X-ray vision, and we use it everyday. We look at each other and scrutinize every little thing we see. I bet you love seeing other people: through your X-ray eyes. We enjoy seeing people in their most vulnerable states.

This generation

This section is three years old now, all-these years we've called ourselves, and our generation, Super.

A bit porapous, isn't it? One thing that's been said of our, generation is that we're too full of ourselves—yeah, we have guts enough to say we're the best people

A big lot of us have online profiles . to proclaim our being, and blogs to let people know what we think. Some of us have our own .com's, our own personal shrines.

We do everything in pursuit of our own perverse happiness. We party, and drink, and do extra things just to get our

We're the "Me" generation! Here's the third secret: Our superpower is "Me."

The older people are freaked out. They think we're careless, that we have no gods, and all that drama. They hope we'll outgrow this phase.

The fourth secret is that we will outgrow it. But we won't turn into them we're different. -

While all generations go through the "finding themselver" phase in their teens, the difference between this gen-eration and the past is where they look for themselves.

Older generations have looked outward, with X-ray eyes. They've submit-ted themselves to systems, and norms, and acceptable truths. They've examined society and changed it, but they've made it more complex.

Our generation's looking for our truth too. We're just looking for it somewhere else. Like, in ourselves.

What truth is this? Is it the meaning of life, or whether Jesus ever married? I hate to sound like Confucius, but I think that the truth is the self. That isn't com-

So how does one get to manage a piece of real estate in the papers? I've gotten a handful of e-mails with different versions of that subject heading. My honest reply has nonetheless been the same: I paid my dues. I started out as an online columnist for You, Inq7's tween-to-teen-to-twentysomething portal, dispatching nuggets about "The Osbournes" and Ja Ruie back in the pre-Paris Hilton days. And along with that, one of my very first articles was published in Candy Magazine. Bet you didn't know that, eh? (Okay, I just dated myself there, but, like, whatever!)

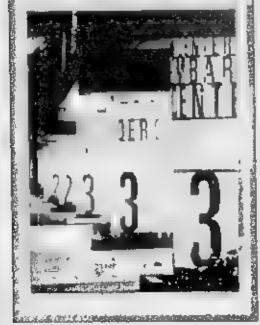

Inasmuch as I'd like to say that I followed the "Looks + Timing = Welcome To The Party" equation, I can't. Because 1 didn't. As card-carrying members of Generation Me, we may have developed a self-confidence and self-reliance that confounds, and sometimes terrifies, older generations: But we have to remember to mix in some ability into that to get farther and last longer in whatever career path we wish-to pursue.

These days, with celebrity becoming easier and easier to obtain and fame and fortune just an audition away, success has never meant less. Stakes are much higher now. It's really up to us to prove to the oldies-and to ourselves, most of all-that scratching our PRfriendly surface will not reveal, like they assume, more surface. To do this requires hard work, and nope, not hard work directed toward self-promotion.

THERE'S GREAT, NEW STUFF OUTSIDE THE confines of Manila. Take the Cebu music scene. They're rocking like there's no... Manila. And the people there are damn good.

One of the bands you have to hear is called Faspitch.

They released their first album "The Furure of Ear Repair" a few weeks ago. Their music's in-they're ready for the big time. The album is far from a letdown. The way they recorded their music is topnotch—they're fresh, but they sound tight enough to be pro-

ROM SUPERSTARS TO SUPER SERVERS?
Pamous celebrities took on a different role when they acted as dub-dubs, bartenders and smiley people greeters at E.G.I. Priday's Glorierta branch recently. During that special day, there were no scripts, no take-twos and no talent fees—it was all about the spirit of volunteerism and the desire to help cancerstrocken children.

"Stars in Stripes" was a fundraising event that gave celebrities the chance to use their popularity to make an impact on society. With the time they spent at T.G.I.Friday's, they were able to help out cancerstricken kids under the care of UP-PGH's Medical Social Service-Onco Support Group.

T.G.I.Friday's enthusiasts bought tickets which included a raffle stub and a sit-down dinner of Friday's Caesar salad,

The Tell-tale Heart: Tips for a Healthy Life

Dr Luisito O. Llido, Head of the Nutrition Support Services of St. Luke's Medical Center is an expert in clinical nutrition with a proven track record in the care of the critically-ill like cardiac patients. He would rather help in the prevention of heart disease than see it in its full-blown manifestation. As part of St. Luke's total quality patient care program, Dr. Llido looks at the over-all health status of a patient and recommends simpler and healther lifestyle change. Here is his prescription for a healthy heart.

Eat right. Making healthy food choices significantly lowers blood pressure and reduces the risk of a heart attack. Loading up on fruits and vegetables, whole grains, nuts and fish keeps the kilos off but your body also needs the right amounts of healthy fat. With high-cholesterol fast food and other convenience items taking up a larger role in the modern diet, you will be better off with balanced nutrition that matches your calorie and protein requirement based on your weight and nutritional assessment.

For obtaining optimum health and maximum productivity, Dr. Llido recommends a balanced diet supplemented with "nutrient-complete" products like Ensure. It provides complete and balanced nutrition and can also be used as a meal replacement to help ward off hypertension, stroke and cardiovascular disease. It gives you the required calories and helps eliminate the "guessing game" associated with fad diets.

Be active. Sedentary lifestyles are the scourge of the modern age. If work and other concerns leave you with no time to exercise, remember that just being physically active doing housework or taking care of the kids already accounts for exercise. So keep moving and do whatever form of exercise is fit for you. Exercise provides health benefits for the whole body like improving circulation and muscle mass function, repairing body tissues and reducing inflammation, aside from promoting heart protection.

Avoid stress. Studies have shown that emotional and physical stress can also imcrease oxidative damage from free radicals to the whole body. It also raises your blood pressure and makes you more prone to heart attacks. So make sure you set aside some time for rest and relaxation. Step back from the "fast lane" and engage in relaxing activities like music, reading, enjoying time with your family, or having special hobbies. Your heart will thank you for it.

Have a positive outlook. Studies have shown that people who look at the brighter side of life tend to have better productivity and stable relationships. Married couples with positive relationships tend to live longer

For an effective patient management approach to intensive and comprehensive pre- and post-operative cardiac rehabilitation, more doctors incorporate daily feedings of Ensure

Ensure is equipped with a heart-defense system rich in antioxidants and low in cholesterol, sodium and saturated fats to assure you of total heart protection. It also has a heart-healthy fat blend that meets the standards set by the American Heart Association.

Or Llido was a guest speaker at the Annual Convention of the Philippine Heart Association held on May 26, 2006 at the EDSA Shangri-la Hotel. He delivered a talk with the topic "Cardio-nutrition: Its Impact on the Total Care of a Patient."

EELING DISPLACED AND disoriented is not an uncommon state when one is in a new place, and experiencing culture shock or just all over shock from his or her surroundings.

These two rather altenating feelings were what but me within the first 48 hours that I arrived, in Mactan, Cebu. Some may think, Cebu?? Friends laughed at my initial whimpers by comparing my past moves to other countries but they just didn't understand where I was coming from. As we age, we form habits, we have comfort zones, or behavioral parterns that give us a sense of place wherever are. If you think only children have security blankets you're wrong, adults have them too, they're just not in tangible forms many times. I had, over the last two years built up a sched ule for myself that jetted between work, socializing, traveling, romance, exercise and hedonism. All of a sudden, I was away from home, but not "away" from home, and short of sounding like a brat, I was at a loss of what to do next. Even with a new job as producer for Fashion TV, and an upcoming Model School Ga.a to look forward to (which was handled rather successfully by new friends and colleagues Rebecca Piket and Daniel Morett.) I was still feeling like I had made a rather drastic change in my life

So what's a newbie to do? Newbie's gotta get busy. Work will soon get up to speed but in the meantime the hyperdrive in me must be so I took a quiet moment, and "asked" the powers that be to keep me occupied and do away with my comfort zone Well, the powers that be, ironically enough, were on hyperdrive and answered me within 48 hours. The first weekend I was invited to a press con headed by the very charismatic and personable Julie Ategrado-Vergara (a dear old friend who I had met almost serendipitously in Cebu more than 3 years ago) Julie had long ago dreamed of putting up a foundation that would be beneficial to ail her countrymen. Her foundation, Turismo Rural, aims to teach and train anyone to promote tourism in their locale, whether it be through ancestral homes, bed and breakfast accommodations or heritage tour in other words, no matter where you come from, there is a beauty there that must be shared to others and through tourism, great or small, a chance exists for the Phi-ppines to improve its economy and its dweners to be more respectful and aware of the treasure they are quite literally, standing on. Aside from being hosted at her already popular family owned and run resort Maribago Blue Water, we were then whisked off to Sumilon Blue Water Island Resort, located about 2 A hours away by car in Oslob, Cebu. On the way, we stopped by an ancestral home, a rocal cafe favorite and a church. Analyzing this situation that had me relaxing and reconnecting with old friends, it was almost as if the weekend was trying to wean me away from my old life through several comfort mamfestations.

But what next? It was the second week, approaching the second weekend (and a Mactan Holiday) and although work had picked up the pace a little bit, I still dreaded the long hours of nothing. Before the pangs hit though, fate intervened again. Another friend, (a blonde, always seemingly programmed on hyperdrive one) called me and asked me to take his place at a series of events being thrown at the Shangri-La Mactan by the Lifestyle Network. White Hot Summer was the theme, and it was going to be chockful of activities from a fashion show, a cooking show, a furniture exhibit, a beach party, and the chicker: spa treatments at the newly opened Chi Spa. I looked back at my comfort zone list, everything was met with a check mark. Who could refuse? Needless to say the Lifestyle Network knew how to shake the homesickness blues. The parties were well atforerunners in Cebu. While the cooking show had me win a book authored (and later auto-

T'S A WEE BIT BIGGER THAN a standard toaster, but it sure packs a wallop. I wish someone told me to step back before switching on the iPod HiFi because now, I think I'm partially deaf. Partially deaf but completely awed.

As I learned, well, the hard way, this baby packs enough power to blow your hair back, as if you were ustening to a whole wall of speakers. (Weil, it didn't help that the first song that blasted out of my iPod was Jason Nevins' remix of N.E.R.D.'s "Rock Star." But still.) The iPod Hi-Fi is really a giant level up from the timy-sounding Altee Lansing mini speakers I'm used to

After filling my room with the sweet sound of (free) music, I decided to introduce my new speakers to the other parts of the house. You know, to see if all the media hyperbole was justified. First stop was, uhm, the bathroom where they say the acoustics are fantastic. Verdict? Fantastic! Yeah, I tripped out on slightly weird, artsy, Icelandic group Sigur Rós ("Saegiopur"). The HiFi's double-walled plastic shell prevents the speakers from vibrating too much, pouring out a distinctly clatter-free sound. (By the way, if you haven't heard Sigur Rós yet, it's what Narma sounds like at cocktail hour)

Since it had hand grips, I was able to lug it around much like a cooler of beer. I parked it in the garden next, to see how my future pool parties would sound. For a taste of bass, I cranked up some old-school dub from Sly & Robbie. The natural bass of the iPod HiFi muscles out of a 130mm woofer and low frequencies—think Benny Benassi's trademark buzzy beats—are boosted even more. (In geek, it's because of the "dual voice coil, ported bass reflex design for bass system." Whatevz.) Just add screaming college kids and it's a party! Party!!!

Anyway.

The fuss-free design is also pure Apple. White and just right, the iPod HiFi's look complements anything you pur near it, whether it's an Art Deco console in your living room or a Gehry-inspired sandcastle at the beach. (Yup, you can make it your beach blanket boombox 'cause it also runs on six D-cell batteries.) No fugly power bricks here; all the components are tucked internally. Whether you own the chunkier models (like the first generation doorstop, er, iPod or the 30GB Video) or the handler ones (like the Mini and Nano), the iPod HiFi also comes with a full range of universal dock adapters.

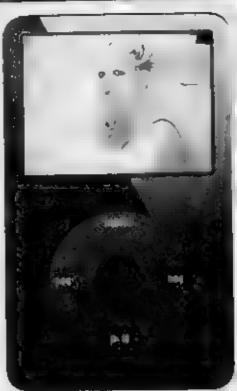

And as a bonus for all you lazyasses out there, the iPod HiFi has its own remote control. Only slightly bigger than a lighter, it has the same straightforward appearance and philosophy as a Shuffle. I kinda wish, though, that it had a clickwheel. My right thumb kept on stroking the buttons instead of pushing down as I'm supposed to do. (And while I'm on the subject, what does the menu button.)

do? Hmmmm )

IMO, the iPod HiFi is the best-sounding new-generation sound system in the market today. Rock or dance, soft or loud, Podcasts or otherwise, eargasms are guaranteed

Take on the road with Volvo's travel safety tips

WHETHER HEADED TO THE BEACH OR TO THE nearest getaway spot, Vo vo packs a heipful dose of hints to make the road trip safer and stress-free.

Most likely, families and friends plan road trips to their favored destinations in the country to experience a brief respite from the daily grind. For those taking the roads, their cars will be their home away from home, offening the best comfort available and making the journey more worthwhile.

Whether travelers are enseonced in the comforts of their Volvos or any other car, it is top-of-mind to experience stress-free driving and arrive at their destination smiling and ready to enjoy. The following are helpful tips to make the drive hassle, stress and worry-free Know your route. Plan and map a quicker route, research the road you want to take.

 Knowing where the nearest gas station and establishments are located may be convenient for those emergency stops. Keep a map on the glove compartment, just in case you get lost

 Head out early. Drive out a few hours earlier, maybe a day to beat the hol day crowd.
 You don't want to spend half the time getting stack in the traffic jam.

 Pack an emergency kit. Bring a handy first-aid medical kit with some lozenges, headache and motion sickness puls. It may come in handy especially if you're driving long hours

• Bring some fun along, Pack some on-road entertainment with CDs, audio books or a personalized play list to keep you from dozing off while driving. Got kids on the backseat? Pack some games and toys for the little ones to keep them from boredom and tantrums. You could make a list of "car games" to play with them once you hit the road.

 Check your car's papers. Make sure your plates, registration and insurance information are all valid. Keep important numbers handy in your car. While you're at it, see to it that your driver's incense hasn't expired.

 Get your car cleaned You'll feet much better driving the distance in a clean car.

 Fill and change. Don't wait until the last minute to gas up and change the oil. Driving on a full tank saves you the time of lining up. for gas with the holiday traffic.

 Give your car a pre-travel checkup You don't want your car heating up or conking out in the middle of the road, so bring it to a customer service center to make sure your bres are sturdy, your lights are all working, and your car's filters, belts and fluid levels are in tiptop shape.

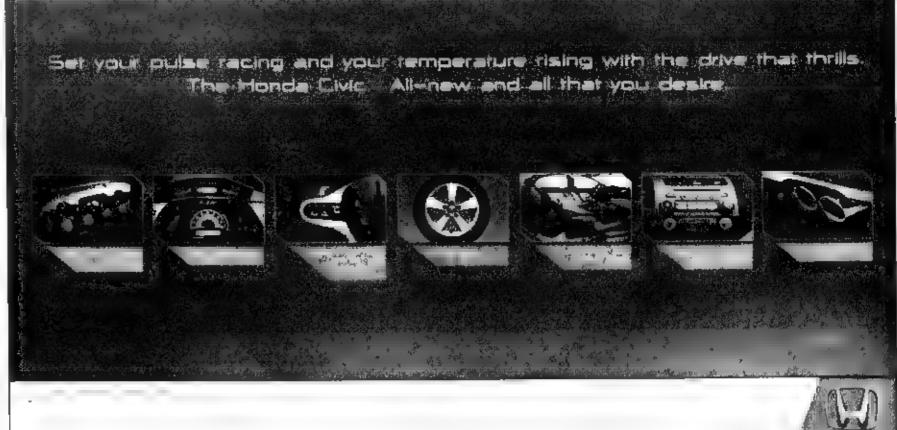

To add to these travel tips, more good news is in store for Volvo owners. A Volvo Customer Service Summer Package is made available until May 30 Before hitting the road and making new adventures with their Volvos, clients can drive by the nearest Volvo Customer Service Center for a pre-road trip maintenance check-up. A 20-percent discount is given to all those who will avail themselves of any of the six packages available that includes the Keep It Cool Package (cooling system check-up), Sure Stop Package (braking system check-up), Clean Air Package (aircon system clean up) Safe Traction Package (tire check and replacement), Steering System Package, and Suspension System Package. For as low as P3,324, chents can have the peace of mind that their Volvo will run smoothly mile after mile, giving outstanding performance while offering creature comforts to the nut. A special Volvo gift awaits chents who avail themselves of the summer packages. What's more, because it's a Volvo, you'll enjoy the drive more knowing you and your loved

HONDA CARS PHILIPPINES INC (HCPI) IS giving Filipinos working abroad the chance to provide their families back home a brand new Honda car with the launch of the Honda CAREmittance Program.

CAREM stance allows overseas Filipino workers worldwide to buy a brand new Hon da car in the Philippines through cash or loan payments with partner banks RCBC, RCBC Savings Bank, BPI and BPI Family Savings Bank.

Honda CAREmittance buyers may place their orders online through www.hondaphil.com or filt in application forms available at participating banks' remittance centers and their tie-ups. Interested parties may just log on to HCPI's website and choose their preferred car model or visit the nearest participating bank to avail themselves of this pioneering program from Honda.

"This is another first for Honda. We know a lot of hard-working Filip nos abroad would appreciate that Honda has finally given them the opportunity to show their families back in the Philippines how much they care for them. This is a good way to let their families know that they have their safety and convenience in mind even if they have to work far from home," said Arne. Doria, HCPI deputy head for marketing.

Cash buyers may fill out Honda CAREmittance application forms on he or in brochures available at any RCBC Telemoney Center and tie ups or at BPI Express Remittance Centers and the ups anywhere in the world and send to caremittance@hondaphil.com. Upon confirmation of order, payments may be made through the said partner remittance centers. Honda will then inform beneficiaries of the delivery of their brand new car Gar loan applicants may also fill out online forms and send to caremitance@hondaphil com together with the following documentary requirements authenticated by the Philippine Consulate in their area, a) latest Income Tax Return; b) Certificate of Employment; c) Special Power of Attorney; and d) Exit Pass. A Proof of Remittance is also required Correspondence will be done through e-mail while family members will also be updated of the status of loan applications, Payments and monthly installments may be coursed through the chosen bank, RCBC Telemoney Centers or BPI Express Remittance Centers worldwide.

CAREmittance buyers also get free LTO registration for three years including hydrophilic paint protector to keep the car glossy for a long time. Standard dealer free-bies such as tint, floor mat and seat cover also apply. Visit www.hondapnil.com now or see posters and flyers for more details. CAREmittance may be reached at 857-7253.

Occupants in the rear benefit from the long wheelbase (2778 mm); this allows a distance between sents and generous knee-room which almost matches that in the S-Class. The B-Class also reaches new dimensions where variability and load capacity are concerned. quickly and easily converted from a comfortable touring car to a practical van. In addition, the design and feel of the interior features complement each other, creating an atmosphere in which the occupants are mmediately at ease to enjoy the high level of long-distance comfort.

Top-class technology

Innovations in the field of suspension technology have contributed greatly to a successful combination of agility, safety and comfort-with all these attributes enjoying equal importance.

The improved Electronic Stability Program (ESP) new has a new, additional function, the Steer Control steering assistance system. This operates in tandem with the electromechanical power steering system, providing the appropriate servo assistance in critical handling situations to help the driver stabilize the vehicle when braking on road surfaces offering less grip on one side than the other. The new ESP function also helps with steering corrections and provides the driver with better road contact

As a further special feature included as standard, the suspension of the Compact Sports Tourer has a new, selective damping system which adapts the shock absorber response to the current driving situation. A soft shock absorber configuration ensures a high level of ride comfort during normal driving, but switches to maximum damping force when taking bends at speed to give the B-Class maximum stability.

That is why we at Hyundai are excited about taking on this new and exciting challenge of pushing our vehicles to an extreme test of performance. A feat, as far as I know, other automotive brands in the country have not taken to its full length," added Perez-Agudo

The full course and length of the "Hyundar Dares: The Cordillera Challenge" was mapped out for Hyundai by motoring expert Isada. It covers an exhausting and demanding campaign that traverses a variety of terrains from flat lands, winding and steep, uphil climbs to rough and narrow roads. The taxing route from Manua to Baguio, Banawe, and Sagada in the Cordilleras and onto Pagudpud and Vigan in the Ilocos and then back to Manila will prove the maneuverability, versatility, and reliability of the Hyundai cars.

Enoc gears up in RP

EMIRATES NATIONAL OIL COMPANY (Enoc) LLC, in coordination with CKW Enterprises, its official distributor of motor oils in the Philippines, unveiled a landmark development in the marketing of the Enoc Lubricants range with a complete packaging revamp aimed at boosting its marketing power and challenging major internanonal players.

Recently, CKW Enterprises unweiled this new look with a grand new packaging launch at the Crowne Plaza hotel. The event was well-attended, from the top Enoc officers and directors from Dubai, to distributors and agents from all over the country. The guests were treated to worldclass entertamment and delectable gourmet treats for the palate.

The grandiose event, the first for Enoc in the country, was truly reflective of the world-class image Enoc is trying to achieve. Hosted by the country's top comedienne and television personality Tuesday Vargas, the night featured many surprises includurg a musical extravaganza, a raffle wherein winners got to take home motorcycle bikes and more, and the most-awaited unveiling of the new packaging of Enoc lubricants.

The wholly owned government of Dubai group has invested heavily in a powerful repackaging overhaul-the first since the launch of its lubricants brand seven years ago-aimed at repositioning Enoc lubricants as an international high quality brand.

This dynamic new look followed intensive research among all stakeholders," said Hussain Sultan, group chief executive and board member, Knoc. "We believe the quality of our lubricants is such that the time is right to challenge other major international players in the market."

The new look of Enoc Lubricants' packaging and labeling is designed to reflect the modernity and towering impact of Dubai worldwide and its integral values of delivering speed, purpose and premium products. The brand icon of Enoc is more prominest, the physical structure of the packaging more aerodynamic with a refined pouring angle to prevent spillage.

This new, world class image is a visual demonstration of our determination to be up there with the best," said Kamal Said, chief operating officer, Enoc International Sales. "In commissioning this overhaul we have been driven by our desire to build an international lubricants brand."

The new Enoc Lubricants packaging isoage was conceived by international identity consultants Landor and follows extensive focus group testing among a range of stakeholders, including end users.

"We are confident that the new look will enhance Enoc's brand compentiveness, keeping us ahead of the competition, reflecting a promise of trust emanating from a region asand with oil production and delivering the quality of performance excellence synonymous with Dubar," added George Garcia, general manager, CKW Enterprises.

"Our aim is to make the Enoc Lubricants' brand a quality flagship for Dubai and the United Arab Emirates," said Mohammed Sadek, manager, Enoc Lubricants. Enoc Lubrigants are sold in more than 20 countries in the Middle East, CIS, Africa and Asia pacific. CKW Enterprises were officially appointed as Enoc exclusive Philippines distributor since 2003. "With CKW Enterprises, we are demonstrating to our customers in Philippines our loud commutment to deliver quality product and service" added Sadek.

Established in 1998, Enoc Lubricants has a wide variety of branded automotive, industrial lubricants product developed to suit market demands. Its flagship productsthe Protec gasoline engine oil range and Vulcan diesel engine oil range-are blended at ISO-9002 certified facilities in Dubai and available in packs of different shapes and sizes with tamper-proof aluminum foil seals for added consumer protection.

Compining for efficiency, safety with 'right size' Suy formula

THE 2006 DODGE DURANGO ADDS several state-of-the-art technologies and conveniences, setting itself apart, again, from the crowded SUV market. The 2006 Dodge Durango offers all the power, capability and style with advances in fuel efficiency and safety-including Chrysler Group's Multi-Displacement System (MDS) and Electronic Stability Program (ESP) that customers expect from a modern SUV

"The 2006 Dodge Durango once more SUV" sets new standards for comfort, efficiency and safety, while living up to the 'utility' promise of sport-utility vehicles," said Darryl Jackson, vice president-Dodge marketing, Chrysler Group. "With bestin-class power, the ability to tow 8,950 pounds, seating for eight passengers and a host of new technologies and amenities, the Dodge Durango offers the ultimate combination of features in the right-size

A significant contributor to Dodge Durango's improved fuel efficiency is MDS technology, which is now standard on the 2006 Dodge Durango's 5 7-inter HEMI V-8

The 2006 Dodge Durango also features a Clean Fuel option for the 4.7-liter V-8 engine, which provides fleet customers the adaptability of operating their Durango on ethanol, gasoline or any mix-three-passenger third-row 60/40 seat, remote start, Tip Start, two new 18-inch wheel options and standard 17inch aluminum wheels.

The 2006 Dodge Darrango is available in three trim levels: SXT (replaces ST), SLT and Limited. In addition, the Adventurer package, introduced in 2006, is also available for 2006.

Multi-Displacement System

With the 5.7-liter HEMI V-8, the Dodge Durango is the most powerful large SUV on the market. For 2006 that esteemed power is available with maximum fuel economy through Chrysler Group's Musti-Displacement System.

"The Multi-Displacement System sucorporated with the Dodge Durango's HEMI engine turns off four of the eight cylinders when the engine is under a light load-such as cruising down the highway-to conserve energy" said Mike Donoughe, vice president-body-on-frame product team, Chrysler Group. "The most amazing attribute to this system is how invisibly it operates. The Hemi can transition from eight cylinders to four in 40 milliseconds. Dodge Durango customers will now realize the fuel-efficiency benefits of MDS without sacrificing power and torque."

Electronic Stability Program

New on the 2006 Dodge Durango is Chrysler Group's Chrysler Group's 2006 SUVs. ESP aids the driver in maintaining vehicle directional stability by providing oversteer and understeer control, to maintain vehicle behavior on

To optimize overall driving performance, ESP helps the driver maintain directional stability in rain, snow, or or on dry powement. The standard Anti-lock Brake System (ABS) is equipped with electronic sensors that help to prevent wheel lockup, and provides excellent stability and maneuverability during braiding on virtually every type of road surface.

Parfect blend of size, power

The 2006 Dodge Durango has the interior room, towing and hanling capability of a large SUV, but achieves the fuel efficiency, performance and handling of smaller full-size

The 230 hp (175 kW) 4.7-liter Magnum V-8 engine is standard on all four-wheel thive Dodge Durangos. With 290 fb.-R. of torque (393 Nm), the 4.7-liter provides smooth and responsive performance.

The award-winning HEMI's 335 bp (257 kW) and 370 lb.-ft. of torque (509 Nm) provides more than ample power for towing and hanling, and is mared to a five-speed autometic transmission. The 5.7-liter HEMI V-8 engine is avail-

Electronic Stability Program, a feature available on all of able on the 2006 Dodge Durango SLT, Adventurer and Limited models. "With a powerful V-6 Magnum engine as staudard, an optional 4.7-liner Magnum V-B and the class-leading HEMI V-8, the 2006 Dodge Durango has a lineup of engines that can't be matched," said Donoughe. "Unsurpassed in acceleration and towing, the 2006 Dodge Durango gives our customers exactly what they want." 2006 Dodge Ourango models with either the 4.7-liter V-8 or 5.7-liter HEMI V-8 offer a "Tow/Haul" transmission feature that provides crisp shifts and reduces gear searching when towing by holding the lower gear longer. The system will also select a lower gear under downhill conditions to utilize the engine's braking capability.

Interior roominess and flexibility

The 2006 Dodge Durango interior is simple, roomy and user-friendly with a functional, yet elegant design. With best-in-class cargo capacity, offering a best-in-class 68.4 cu. ft. of cargo room with the third-row seats folded, Dodge Durango easily surpasses other full-size SUVs.

The 2006 Dodge Durango features a smooth and quiet ride, with precise handling-benefits of the Dodge Durango's torsionally stiff hydroformed frame and independent front suspension with rack and pinion steering.

"The Dodge Durango features a fully hydroformed frame and chassis that is unique to Durango," said Donoughe. "We have delivered an exceptional-handling SUV that delivers a refined driving experience, whether it's during a trip to the grocery store or a family vacation. In the crowded SUV market, the 2006 Dodge Durango's smooth ride truly distinguishes itself from the pack."

Dodge Durango's smooth ride is also the result of a unique rear suspension with coil springs and a solid rear axle that delivers durability, payload and best-in-class towing capability. A Watt linkage system is fitted to the rear axle, centering the axle and reducing rear-end skate over rough surfaces. The rear suspension supports a Gross Vehicle Weight Rating (GVWR) of 6,600 pounds and towing capacity of 8,950 pounds.

Five-star safety rating

The Dodge Durango was awarded a Pive-Star frontal impact rating by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) in 2005. New for 2006 is a roll-sensing side-curtain air bag system that uses sensors to keep side-currain air bags deployed longer in rollovers.

The Dodge Durango's hydroformed and fully boxed frame provides excellent crash protection. In addition, octagonal front frame rail tips with patented crush initiators are designed to consistently absorb Standard on the 2006 Dodge Durango is an advanced air bag system that includes dual-stage front air bags and an occupant-sensing system for the passenger-side front air bag. Ali seats in the Dodge Durango feature three-point shoulder belts, including a center-mounted, three-point shoulder belt incorporated into the second-row seating area

Department Store | | |

They're everywhere! The global growth of a retail icon

A DEPARTMENT STORE IS A RETAIL establishment which specializes in selling a wide range of products without a single predominant merchandise line. Department stores usually sell products including apparel, furniture, appliances, and additionally select other lines of products such as paint, hardware, toiletries, cosmetics, photographic equipment, jewelry, toys, and sporting goods. Certain department stores are further classified as discount department stores. Discount department stores commonly have central customer checkout areas, generally in the front area of the store. Department stores are usually part of a retail chain of many stores situated around a country or several countries.

Roots in Russia, France, Canada

Hudson's Bay Company in Canada was the first store to include departments; however, by modern standards, it would not be considered a department store because of the size and range of items that were stocked. The same may be said about Gostiny Dvor in St Petersburg, which opened in 1785 and should probably be regarded as the one of the first purposely built shopping malls in the world, as it consisted of more than 100 shops covering an area of over 53,000 squ.

The first true department store was founded by Aristide Boucicaut in Paris. He founded Bon Marché in 1838, and by 1852 it offered a wide variety of goods in "departments" inside one building. Goods were sold at fixed prices, with guarantees allowing exchanges and refunds. By the end of the 19th century, Georges Dufayel, a French credit merchant, had served up to 3 million customers and was affiliated with La Samaritaine, a large French department store established in 1870 by a former Bon Marché executive.

The oldest independent department store in the world, until it was recently purchased by House of Fraser, was Jenners in Edinburgh, Scotland, which has maintained its original position on Edinburgh's Princes Street since 1838.

In New York City in 1846, Alexander Turney Stewart established the Marble Palace on the east-Broadway, between Chambers and Reade streets. He offered European retail merchandise at fixed prices on a variety of dry goods, and advertised a policy of providing "free entrance" to all potential customers. Though it was clad in white marble to look like a Renaissance palazzo, the building's cast fron construction permitted large plate glass windows. In 1862 Stewart built a department store on a full city block at Broadway and 9th Street, opposite Grace Church, with eight Boors and 19 departments of dress goods and furnishing materials, carpets, glass and china, toys and sports equipment, ranged around a central glass-covered court. Within a couple of decades, New York's retail center had moved uptown, forming a stretch of retail shopping from Marble Palace that was called the "Ladies' Mile". -In 1858 Rowland Hussey Macy founded Macy's as a dry goods store. Benjamin Altman and Lord & Taylor soon competed with Stewart as New York's first department stores, later followed by McCreary's and, in Brooklyn, Abraham & Straus (The Straus family would be in the management of both Macy's and A&S.

Similar developments were under way in London (with Whiteleys) and in Paris (with La Samaritaine) and in Chicago, where department stores sprang up along State Street, notably Marshall Field and Company, which remains the second-largest store in the world (after Macy's).

On March 1, 1869 Zion's Cooperative Mercantile Institution was opened in Salt . Lake City as a new community store that became the first incorporated department store in America in 1870. A new 3- 1 story brick and iron store was built in 1876, noted for its unique architecture and striped awalnes. This store was replaced by an enclosed shopping center in 1973, and the new Zion department store preserved the gilt-edged ornate facade of the old store. In 1999 the May Department Stores bought a 14-store ZCMI chain and changed its name to Meier & Frank, a May property with eight stores in Oregon and Washington.

By 1890 a new world of retailing had been created as department stores had a clear market position as universal providers. General stores eventually became department stores as small towns

FURNITURE arranged the way you envision them at home is now a usual sight in department stores.

Department stores first appeared in China at the beginning of the 20th century, the concept said to be introduced by expatriate Chinese living in Australia. Before 1949, there were four main department stores in Shanghair Wing On, Sincere, Sun Sun and Yat Sun, the first two still exist today.

During World War II patriotic sentiment in China had led to the formation of a number of department stores specializing in locally made merchandise. This type of stores became the mainstay in China after the formation of the Communist state in 1949.

Both types of department stores have long had branches in Hong Kong, bowever Japanese department stores began to appear in the 1960s, and within a generation's time became the dominant force in the market. The Asian financial crisis of the late 1990s had resuited in the closures of some of these stores, but on the whole Hong Kong still has one of the world's most competitive retail
